Development Planning and Decolonization in Nigeria Toyin Falola, 1996 Brilliantly executed from start to finish Elegantly written this book represents a substantial advance in our knowledge of the colonial administration often called the colonial state and economy after the Second World War Makes a significant contribution to scholarship in economic history in general and on African development planning in particular The conclusion is brilliant controversial yet persuasive A G Adebayo Kennesaw State College There is no comparable book not just with respect to Nigeria but indeed the entire West African subregion It is a significant work carefully constructed without ideological encumbrances Provocative in many parts and fascinating to read it is bound to have a lasting impact on the understanding of the colonial economy in the post World War II era Don C Ohadike Cornell University By the time Nigeria attained independence from Great Britain in 1960 colonial development planning had profoundly shaped the way Nigerians thought about the role of the state and about the way to implement development policies This major work links the colonial and postcolonial development processes uncovering the historical roots of the contemporary crisis in Nigeria and its intractable problem of poverty The book analyzes the origins of planning and the impact of development schemes on Nigeria from 1940 to 1960 Using the methods of economic history and based primarily on official documents from Britain the United States and three archives in Nigeria it examines the conflict generated by the first colonial development plans and the details of the Ten Year Plan of 1946 55 The author distributes the responsibility and the blame for poor planning between the British colonial powers who sought minimal goals and the Nigerian elite who had big aspirations Told for the first time by a native African scholar this story of development planning shows clearly where Nigeria went adrift in its transformation from a traditional society to a modern one and calls into question theoretical and ideological foundations of development planning throughout Africa Toyin Falola is professor of African history at the University of Texas at Austin He is the author or editor of 15 books including Modern Nigeria Pawnship in Africa Debt Bondage in Historical Perspective Nigeria and Britain and The Religious Impact on the Nation State He is the joint editor of the Journal of African Economic History and the associate editor of Environment and History

Nationalism and African Intellectuals Toyin Falola, 2004 An examination of the attempt by Western educated African intellectuals to create a better Africa through connecting nationalism to knowledge from the anti colonial movement to the present day This book is about how African intellectuals influenced primarily by nationalism have addressed the inter related issues of power identity politics self assertion and autonomy for themselves and their continent from the mid nineteenth century onward Their major goal was to create a better Africa by connecting nationalism to knowledge The results have been mixed from the glorious euphoria of the success of anti colonial movements to the depressing circumstances of the African condition as we enter a new millennium As the intellectual elite is a creation of the Western formal school system the ideas it generated are also connected to the larger world of scholarship This world is in turn shaped by European contacts with Africa from the fifteenth century onward the politics of the Cold War and the subsequent collapse of the Soviet Union In essence Africa and its elite cannot be fully understood without also considering the West and changing global politics Neither can the academic and media contributions by non Africans be ignored as these also affect the ways that Africans think about themselves and their continent Nationalism and African Intellectuals examines intellectuals ambivalent relationships with the colonial apparatus and subsequent nation state formations the contradictions manifested within pan Africanism and nationalism and the relation of academic institutions and intellectual production to the state during the nationalism period and beyond Toyin Falola is the Jacob and Frances Sanger Mossiker Chair in the Humanities and University Distinguished Teaching Professor at the University of Texas at Austin
