Scott,1987-06-30 The purpose of the present series of publications is two fold In the first place it is intended to review progress in the development of practical stabilising systems for a wide range of polymers and applications A complementary and ultimately more important objective is to accommodate these practical developments within the framework of antioxidant theory since there can be little question that further major advances in the practice of stabilisation technology will only be possible on the basis of a firm mechanistic foundation Research into the role of stable free radicals as antioxidants and stabilisers for polymers has intensified in recent years Nitroxyl radicals nitroxides were the earliest long lived radicals to be investigated in detail and Maslov and Zaikov review the developments that have taken place in understanding their reaction mechanisms from the time when they were first investigated in liquid hydrocarbon systems to the present day when their outstanding performance as light stabilisers has been the object of much scientific research Although some features of their reactivity remain obscure the authors approach the problem kinetically and indicate the factors limiting their effectiveness Developments in Polymer Stabilisation ,1979 Developments in Polymer Stabilisation—8 G. Gerald Scott,1980 Developments in Polymer Stabilisation - 8 Gerald Scott,1987 Reactive Modifiers for Polymers S. Al-Malaika,2012-12-06 Chemical modification of polymers by reactive modifiers is no longer an academic curiosity but a commercial reality that has delivered a diverse range of speciality materials for niche markets reactively grafted styrenic alloys maleated polyolefins super tough nylons silane modified and moisture cured polyolefins and thermoplastic elastomers are but few examples of commercial successes Although the approach of reactive modification of polymers has been largely achieved either in solution or in the solid state through in situ reactions in polymer melts it is the latter route that has attracted most attention in the last two decades owing to its flexibility and cost effectiveness This route referred to as reactive processing focuses on the use of suitable reactive modifiers and the adoption of conventional polymer processing machinery an extruder or a mixer as a chemical reactor to perform in situ targeted reactions for chemical modification of preformed polymers This relatively simple though scientifically highly challenging approach to reactive modification offers unique opportunities in exploiting various reactive modifiers for the purpose of altering and transforming in a controlled manner the properties of preformed commercial polymers into new speciality materials with tailor made properties and custom designed performance for target applications Such an economically attractive route constitutes a radical diversion away from the traditional practices of manufacturing new polymers from monomers which involves massive investments in sophisticated technologies and chemical plants

Handbook of Polymer Degradation S. Halim Hamid, 2000-06-30 Covers recent advances in polymer degradation and stabilization Focuses on the basics of photo and bio degradability Delineates special and general environmental parameters such as solar irradiation temperature and agrochemical exposure Surveys plastic waste disposal strategies such as recycling incineration chemical recovery by pyrolysis and source reduction
