Devolution And Constitutional Development In The Canadian North:

Devolution and Constitutional Development in the Canadian North Gurston Dacks,1990 A collection of papers on the process of devolution in the Yukon and Northwest Territories Discusses many aspects of constitutional devolution including historical perspectives effect on forest fire and wildlife management healthcare local government oil and gas accords regional development and politics Includes references Whose North? M. O. Dickerson,Arctic Institute of North America,1992 Story of a little ice boy who must learn to live among people and most important of all learn to love them

Canada: the State of the Federation 1992 Douglas M. Brown,Robert A. Young,1992-10 Canada: The State of the Federation 2013 Martin Papillon,André Juneau,2016-03-01 Traditionally associated with the federal government Aboriginal policy has arguably become a far more complex reality With or without formal self government Aboriginal communities and nations are increasingly assertive in establishing their own authority in areas as diverse as education land management the administration of justice family and social services and housing The 2013 State of the Federation volume gathers experts and practitioners to discuss the contemporary dynamics patterns and challenges of Aboriginal multilevel governance in a wide range of policy areas Recent court decisions on Aboriginal rights notably on the duty to consult have forced provincial and territorial governments to develop more sustained relationships with Aboriginal organizations and governments especially in the management of lands and resources Showing that Aboriginal governance is more than ever a multilevel reality contributors address questions such as What are the challenges in negotiating and implementing these bilateral and trilateral governance agreements Are these governance arrangements conducive to real and sustained Aboriginal participation in the policy process Finally what are the implications of these various developments for Canadian federalism and for the rights and status of Aboriginal peoples in relation to the Canadian federation Northern Governments in Transition Kirk Cameron,Graham White,1995 Northern Government in Transition reflects the view that the fascinating political processes unfolding in the North are of interest to Canadians elsewhere who can learn much from the experience of the northern territories about the nature of politics the capacity of government institutions to accommodate diverse interests and perspectives and the value of openness to new political forms Transforming Provincial Politics Bryan M. Evans,Charles W. Smith,2015-01-01 Transforming Provincial Politics is the first province by province analysis of politics and political economy in more than a decade and the first to directly examine the turn to neoliberal policies at the provincial and territorial level and examines how neoliberal policies have affected politics in each jurisdiction in Canada An Aboriginal Northern Territory Peter Jull,Australian National University. North Australia Research Unit,1992 This paper reviews the history and development of the concept of Nunavut and draws conclusions that may be applicable to the northern regions and peoples of Australia and similar states Fiscal Federalism in Canada André Lecours,Daniel Béland,Trevor Tombe,Eric Champagne,2023-11-30 Featuring insights from some of the top specialists in the country Fiscal Federalism in Canada

unpacks numerous complexities of fiscal federalism in Canada. The book features key regional and provincial perspectives while taking into account Indigenous realities, the three territories and municipal affairs. The contributing authors go beyond the major federal transfers to examine the financing of education, cities, infrastructure and housing. This volume shows that fiscal federalism is much more than simply an aggregate of individual programs and transfers. It highlights the role of actors other than the federal and provincial governments and recalls the importance of territoriality. The book pays close attention to the political dimension of fiscal federalism in Canada, which is at the heart of how the federation functions and is essential to its governance. Fiscal federalism is central to the funding of critical programs through intergovernmental transfers, but it is also the focus of political debates on territorial redistribution. In tackling essential questions, Fiscal Federalism in Canada contributes to the so-called second generation fiscal federalism literature, taking stock of the critical sociological and political issues at its core.

Canada: The State of the Federation, 2011 Nadia Verrelli, 2015-01-01. In this edition of Canada State of the Federation, contributors consider whether and to what degree the relationship between the central government and the provincial and territorial governments has changed in the past decade. The authors address three overarching questions: First, is the power base changing in Canada? If so, how are governments responding? Second, what are the implications of the changing environment for the relationships between governments? And third, are there underlying forces such as economic or technological change or demands for citizen engagement that are pushing some provinces and regions to become more assertive in the global environment? The papers are organized into four categories: those that identify and analyze the changing federal environment; those concerned with the implications of the 2011 federal election; those that deal with health policy and economic federalism; and those that explore the growing importance of the North and the changing dynamics among the provinces and the federal government. Among the topics discussed are the impact of a majority government based on a West Ontario coalition with Quebec, represented primarily by the Opposition; the implications of the trade-off between health care spending and the public financing of other essential public goods; and second generation trade agreements such as the Canada-European Union Comprehensive Trade Agreement.

Management, Technology and Human Resources Policy in the Arctic (The North) L. Lyck, V.I. Boyko, 2012-12-06. In social science terms, the Arctic is a relative, not an absolute, concept relating to several dimensions such as constitutional and geographic status, remoteness, socioeconomic status, and demographic/anthropological factors. There is only one sovereign state with all its territory situated in the Arctic: Iceland. But many other areas of the globe have shared characteristics: Alaska, Yukon, Northwest Territories, areas of Norway, Sweden, and Finland north of the Polar Circle, Greenland, the Faroes. Remoteness has to do with distance from the centre, as well as accessibility, transportation, and communication. Socioeconomically, the Arctic is characterised by a low population density, a fragile natural environment, and overwhelming economic dependence on one or a few resources, often coupled with income transfer. Demographically, the region has a large number of indigenous peoples, heavy immigration from the South, albeit only seasonal minority problems immigrant majorities high infant mortality low expected lifespan The present book is the first to present a large number of articles on the contemporary social economic and political development in the Arctic written by social scientists from Russia and the western world many of whom live and conduct their research in the region The book thus presents a much more complete picture of the modern world of the Arctic offering a unique opportunity to compare what is happening in the different parts of the region

Resource and Environmental Management in Canada Bruce Mitchell, 1995 Conflict and uncertainty are the basic themes of Resource and Environmental Management in Canada 2 e Different understandings values interests and contexts lead to varying preferences regarding goals and objectives alternative interpretations of information and evidence and various ideas regarding appropriate strategies and actions Indeed resource and environmental management often seem to centre upon the resolution of conflict generated by differing regional sectoral substantive or ideological perspectives Uncertainty is also a basic feature of resource and environmental management Nevertheless decisions must be made even when analysts and managers are not at all sure about future or present conditions The twin focus on conflict and uncertainty is a reminder that there are rarely perfect solutions to complex problems but rather a mix of imperfect responses from which we must choose In this second edition all twelve chapters in the first edition have been revised some quite significantly Also there are five new chapters that deal with First Nations gender relationships free trade fisheries management on the East Coast and tensions between hinterland and heartland areas International Directory to Canadian Studies, 1980
