Introduction to Diagnosis in Traditional Chinese Medicine Hongzhou Wu,2013

The Theory of Diagnostics in Traditional Chinese Medicine Henry C.

Lu,2013-09-06 Typically a textbook of TCM diagnostics consists of two aspects first learning how to look for indications of a patient including clinical signs symptoms and diseases second learning the syndromes to account for the indications In clinic a doctor diagnoses a patient to collect indications from the patient by observations questioning etc such as diarrhea cough pale complexion red tongue and so on Each indication may be attributed to a number of syndromes in the vast majority of cases On the other hand each syndrome may contain a number of indication also The traditional methods of diagnosis include 1 diagnosis by observations 2 diagnosis by auscultation hearing and olfaction sense of smell 3 diagnosis by interrogating the patients 4 diagnosis by taking the pulse and palpation Generally speaking diagnosis by observations is to identify change that occurs on body surface of the patient by observations including tongue diagnosis Tooth marks on the tongue may be attributed to spleen energy deficiency damp sputum obstructing middle burning space both energy and yin in deficiency Tongue without coating points to deficiency internal dryness cold energy deficiency heat at the nutritive level

Introduction to Diagnosis in Traditional Chinese Medicine Hong-Zhou Wu,Zhao-qin Fang,Pan-ji Cheng,2013 The 21st century is the start of an era where people are beginning to look at health and medical care from a different perspective Understanding the conventional pattern of medical treatment alone has ceased to meet the ever growing demands of social development and hence the trend of exploiting natural therapies has gradually emerged Besides turning to Chinese medicine as an option for treatment increasingly the principles and practices used in this field have been garnering more interest This is exactly the reason why this book is compiled It is our hope that the contents can be of help to the readers to not only understand but suitably apply Chinese medicine in practice and thus benefit their health Diagnosis in Chinese

Chinese Medicine ,1990 The Guidelines for Differential Diagnosis Intraditional Chinese Medicine Henry C. Lu,2013-09 Differential diagnosis is the ultimate objective of learning diagnostics in traditional Chinese medicine In other words every thing we learn about diagnostics is to know how to make differential diagnosis so that we can treat symptoms and diseases accordingly In TCM diagnosis the doctor needs to collect data from the patient in different ways notably by questioning the patient observing the patient and taking the pulses etc which may be called diagnosis of individual syndromes And then the doctor needs to determine what syndrome or syndromes are established from the individual syndromes which may be called diagnosis of integrated syndromes This book introduces five objective methods of differential diagnosis Practice Examination Questions for Diagnosis in Traditional Chinese Medicine Shaozhi Li,Xiaohong

Tan,2003-12-01 Any kind of TCM therapeutic method which you offer to your patient is based on your skills of syndrome

differentiation It is important for TCM students to obtain the basic knowledge and skill of diagnosis in their limited time especially for those 2nd or 3rd year students who are facing the NACCAOM tests in order to get their acupuncture license in the United States Diagnosis is one of the most crucial aspects of the NACCAOM tests It is difficult to imagine one who does not understand diagnosis very well would be able to pass the board examinations or be competent enough to serve his or her community The purpose of this book is to help students review TCM diagnosis and grasp the keywords for syndrome differentiation by doing practical questions Based on more than 15 years experience in teaching TCM diagnosis in both China and United States the authors have created more than 1800 diagnostic questions which were used for their students to prepare for NCCAOM examinations The questions got very good feedback from their students who took the NCCAOM tests No doubt it is a good book for students who prepare for both the acupuncture and herbology examinations of the NCCAOM The authors are grateful to their students the Texas College of Traditional Chinese Medicine the Florida Institute of Traditional Chinese medicine and the Hunan College of Traditional Chinese medicine It would have been impossible to write the book without their encouragement and support

Clinic Data-Based Diagnostics in Traditional Chinese Medicine Henry C. Lu, 2016-05-20 In TCM diagnosis the doctor needs to collect data from the patient by questioning the patient observing the patient and taking the pulses etc which is the first step in clinical practice And then the doctor needs to determine what syndromes are established from the individual symptoms Typically what a Chinese doctor does is to analyze the individual syndromes through reasoning and come up with an integrated syndrome Unfortunately to come up with an integrated syndrome through reasoning alone may be too subjective or unreliable This from my point of view seems to stand out as a most serious theoretical gap between individual symptoms and integrated syndromes in TCM which must be improved accordingly in order to make clinical practice in TCM a more complete system of discipline Sometimes the same disease attacks different people who are then treated in the same way and by the same medicine but more often than not some of them recover after treatment others remain the same still others even get worse Why is that The reason is that even though the same disease attacks nevertheless it attacks different people In what way are people different It is maintained in traditional Chinese medicine that people are different mainly in their constitutions called physical conditions People are broadly classified into six types of physical conditions each of which displays distinct signs and symptoms and requires certain remedies for their good health In a very important way diagnosis of syndromes is to identify the patient's physical conditions through For example if a patient is diagnosed as 400kx lung energy deficiency C it means the patient's physical conditions belong to C

Advanced Diagnosis of Syndromes in Traditional Chinese Medicine Henry C. Lu, 2013-01-22 In traditional Chinese medicine a doctor will treat syndromes not diseases or symptoms or clinical signs and for that reason the objective of diagnosis is to establish the syndrome involved in each clinical case and treat it accordingly A Chinese doctor relies very heavily on the clinical signs to identify the syndrome involved The method of diagnosis introduced in this book may be compared to voting during an election The syndrome that shows the highest number of votes is to be selected as the syndrome to be treated in a particular clinical case
