Basket Weaving

Introduction: According to the Milwaukee Museum, Philippines baskets are constructed from bamboo and rattan and often a combination of the two.

Plaiting and twining produces a wide range of sizes and forms. Most Filipinos use baskets for transportation and farm work, food service and storage, fishing and trapping, clothing, and to carry personal items.

Household items are secured in baskets. Clothing and blankets are kept fresh and dry in lidded containers. A tampipi is a common basket type for storing clothing and blankets.

Winnowing trays are used to separate rice from its hull. Serving trays present rice and other foods for consumption. The baskets shown here are from the Bontoc Igorot people of the mountain area of Luzon Island.

Bontoc men carry tobacco and other personal belongings in small bags shaped to fit beneath the arm (upper). Often compartmentalized, these bags include a "secret" compartment where valuables can be stored. Meals are transported in tightly-woven lunch boxes called topil.

Bamboo and rattan hats vary in shape, size, and design, but all function to protect the wearer from sun and rain.
