

Upper Pressure 5.12c ●●●

Originally done as a 2nd pitch to Older Pressure, but even better as the first to reach P1. From the belay, continue up the ground level and past a difficult move.

1 bolt, 20 Clim Belay, Wheatley, 2001

Headless Frankenbikes 5.12a ●●●

Brown and Gene Sims were discussing a route that Kentucky food (Chickens was using birds that were grown in tubes and had no birds or heads. (Brown declared they were fairly anyway!) Start in a crack left of Cygnetics, then step right to bolts leading to a series of flakes. Step and pump lead like climbing on Safety parachute. Step right to anchors on a short pitch.

1 bolt, 20 Clim Belay, Gene Sims, 2001

Headless Devilish Oldies 5.12 ●●●●

An excellent nature pitch that links Frankenbikes into Upper Pressure via two new bolts of 5.10 climbing. A 7th rope BARS gets you down — last your rope wall!

USA 10 bolts, 20 Clim Belay, 2011

Cygnetics 5.12c ●●●●

One of the basic routes at the face, with interesting history: got up on aid for two legendary climbing wall climbers, a Californian and a Canadian, who had never climbed together, a last minute practice for an early ascent of the Diamond. P1: at 8. 1. 10. Many parties do just this pitch, and it is a favorite for warming 18 muscles. Climb the steep, tricky, right-leaning crack to anchors on a rope. P2: at 8. 1. 10. Head up from the belay, step left, then step right across a thinness, exposed wall. Continue up water basin to an anchor near the summit.

20 Clim Belay, 2002, 2003, P1: Gene Sims, 2001
20 Clim Belay, 2001, 2002, 2003, P2: Gene Sims, 2001

Descent: P1: best to walk off to the left, two ropes are needed to reach the ground in one rope. Alternately, rope off below, which will require some skillful swinging in to the first anchor, with the ends of your rope dangling in space. For both!

Absolute Zero 5.11c ●●●●

AAA Cygnetics Descent: This line climbs the line of the original aid ascent, adding an excellent rope and allowing the route to be done in one long pitch. Start on P2 but instead of stepping left, step up and right on the diagonal crack, then head straight up past a bolt to join the regular route. Several lowering and death have occurred on this route — a 7th rope is NOT long enough to lower to the ground (do this especially well, but do your own research!) Lowering here requires knowledge or swinging in to reach the mid anchor. The walk off is quick and easy.

USA 10 Clim Belay, 2001, 2002, 2003, 2004

New Cygnetics 5.12b ●●●

A difficult alternate finish to Cygnetics, done headpoint style. Do not do a ground up lead. From the P1 anchor, step right on a rope and gain left-facing features on the white wall. Then straight up (smooth in this year to questionable rock), eventually drifting left to join Cygnetics on one ground. May 20 and 2002, 2003, 2004, 2005, 2006, 2007, 2008, 2009

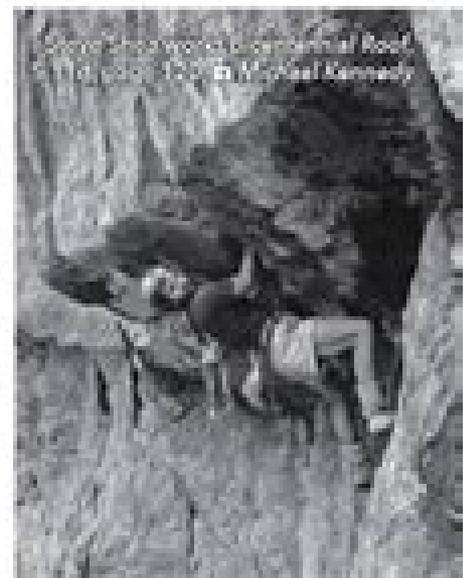

The next two routes start in the same place. Most teams might to gain obvious features that are guarded by steep, another team directly below them.

The Engagement 5.12c ●●●

A alternate pitch up the wall and under right of Cygnetics. This had been used for a long time! Clim Belay. "Climber added part of this route in '95. His highpoint was the old bottomhead bolt. Using a top rope over this '97. John Seiger and I both free climbed up to the jug on the white. We had interest, because the rest of the route looked like 5.11 on walls of fairly thin."

The first ascent party simply placed an anchor below the little third Crack at the top, had ropes on small bolts in the perennials, in a hammer finish on the white.
2001 10 bolts, 20 Clim Belay, Seiger, 2001

The next two routes are multi-pitch routes where 5.11 lower sections are done much more often than their 5.12 work. The usual method for climbing the upper route is to belay below the rock, lead and lower down back to the anchor, then up (single side rope-10) to the ground.
