Women, Power, Politics Sylvia B. Bashevkin, 2009 Women's participation in politics matters very much. Yet in Canada women MPs have been stuck at a level of roughly one fifth since 1993 and Stephen Harper has fewer women in his government than did Brian Mulroney. Although we may believe women are making progress their representation in politics seems decidedly stalled. So it comes as no surprise that we hear little about issues of particular interest to women: breast cancer, violence against women or the poverty of single mothers. In this engaging, no-nonsense and witty book Sylvia Bashevkin argues that Canadians have a profound unease with women in positions of political authority, what she calls the women plus power equals discomfort equation. She explores the specific reasons why this discomfort is particularly severe in Canada. Bashevkin also evaluates a range of barriers faced by women who enter politics, including the media's role in assessing the leadership styles, personal appearances and private lives of female politicians. In clear, accessible terms Bashevkin explains concepts such as gender schemas and media framing in terms of key examples such as Belinda Stronach and Hillary Clinton. Finally Bashevkin outlines some compelling solutions to address the stalemate facing women in Canadian politics.

Religion and Public Life in Canada Marguerite Van Die, 2001-01-01 As this collection of scholarly case studies reveals, religion once played a major public role in all aspects of Canadian society, including politics, education and culture.

Toeing the Lines Sylvia B. Bashevkin, 1993 This is the only book to examine the political history, attitudes and participation of women in English Canadian political parties. It reviews the background to female enfranchisement and the right to hold public office, sit in the Senate and entrench equal rights in the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms. Bashevkin argues that relatively few women are active at elite levels in political parties, particularly in those that hold power or are in a competitive position in the
