Agricultural Bioterrorism Henry S. Parker, 2002 Countering Agricultural Bioterrorism National Research Council, Division on Earth and Life Studies, Board on Life Sciences, Board on Agriculture and Natural Resources, Committee on Biological Threats to Agricultural Plants and Animals, 2003-05-30 Public confidence in the security of the US food and fiber system has been sustained by the quality variety abundance and affordability of agricultural products in the United States Although the system in place to defend against unintentional threats to agriculture has weaknesses and needs the demonstrated ability of the system to resolve accommodate or manage critical food safety problems temporary shortages of some commodities plant and animal infestations and diseases and natural disasters indicates that in general such confidence has been warranted However over the last several years there has been recognition of the possibility and consequences of intentional threats directed at US agriculture Such attacks could come from foreign or domestic terrorists and use biological chemical or radiological agents They could be directed at the pre harvest live plant and live animal or post harvest processing and distribution stages of food and fiber production Countering Agricultural Bioterrorism assesses the vulnerability of US agriculture to intentional threats and provides recommendations needed to strengthen and adapt the US system for defense against biological threats to agriculture

Hitting America's Soft Underbelly Peter Chalk, 2004-01-29 Over the past decade the United States has endeavored to increase its ability to detect prevent and respond to terrorist threats and incidents The agriculture sector and the food industry in general however have received comparatively little attention with respect to protection against terrorist incidents This study aims to expand the current debate on domestic homeland security by assessing the vulnerabilities of the agricultural sector and the food chain to a deliberate act of biological terrorism and exploring the likely outcomes of a successful attack

Agricultural Bioterrorism Henry S. Parker, 2004-09-01 The astonishing specter of September 11 2001 jarred America and indeed all free nations into accepting the previously unthinkable the world's only remaining superpower is vulnerable to catastrophic attack and asymmetric warfare even within its own borders In a few short hours Americans came to realize that for a fanatical resourceful and patient enemy there are neither ethical bounds nor societal mores to delineate the nature of the target the weapon of choice or the scale of the violence To put it another way for these enemies there are no rules of engagement and there is no honor Since September 11 our national sense of vulnerability has steadily risen We have been in a near constant state of high alert because of credible threats to our Nation's nuclear installations power plants transportation nodes and other critical national infrastructures We know that at least nine countries support offensive terrorism programs and that Al Qaeda Osama bin Laden's international terrorist organization has been committed to developing and deploying weapons of mass destruction against U S targets And the possibility that the recent anthrax attacks were perpetrated by a domestic terrorist with access to a Federal Government academic or private laboratory that possessed anthrax for legitimate scientific reasons has brought fear to the doorsteps of virtually every home business and public institution in the country We are now also facing up to a less publicized but potentially devastating threat terrorism directed against the Nation's food and agricultural infrastructure As this paper elucidates American farms food and agriculture systems are exceedingly vulnerable to deliberate disruption by hostile interests intent on undermining confidence in food supplies or wreaking havoc on the agricultural sector of the American economy which accounts for one sixth of our gross domestic product Because of its breadth diversity and unparalleled success U S agriculture is an inviting target for terrorists Not only are food supplies vital for feeding our own population and others around the world and important for the Nation's economic health but American agriculture is a vivid example of the capabilities of modern scientific farming Intelligence reports indicate that a number of countries have active research programs that could produce biological agents to threaten crops and livestock Naturally occurring outbreaks of diseases signal the devastation that could result from a carefully choreographed intentional release Thus the recent Foot and mouth disease epidemics in Taiwan and Great Britain or hog cholera in the Netherlands or the infection of Florida citrus trees with citrus canker aptly demonstrate the vulnerability of living targets to biological pathogens and the economic chaos that can result from an outbreak intentional or otherwise Floyd P Horn Director for Food Agriculture and Water Security Office of Homeland Security Executive Office of the President

Agricultural Bioterrorism U. S. Military, National Defense University (NDU), U. S. Government, 2017-08-28 The United States ignores the potential for agricultural bioterrorism at its peril The relative ease of a catastrophic bio weapons attack against the American food and agriculture infrastructure and the devastating economic and social consequences of such an act demand that the Nation pursue an aggressive focused coordinated and stand alone national strategy to combat agricultural bioterrorism The strategy should build on counterterrorism initiatives already underway leverage existing Federal state and local programs and capabilities and involve key customers stakeholders and partners The U S Department of Agriculture should lead the development of this strategy We know that at least nine countries support offensive terrorism programs and that Al Qaeda Osama bin Laden s international terrorist organization has been committed to developing and deploying weapons of mass destruction against U S targets And the possibility that the recent anthrax attacks were perpetrated by a domestic terrorist with access to a Federal Government academic or private laboratory that possessed anthrax for legitimate scientific reasons has brought fear to the doorsteps of virtually every home business and public institution in the country We are now also facing up to a less publicized but potentially devastating threat terrorism directed against the Nation s food and agricultural infrastructure As this paper elucidates American farms food and agriculture systems are exceedingly vulnerable to deliberate disruption by hostile interests intent on undermining confidence in food supplies or wreaking havoc on the agricultural sector of the American economy which accounts for one sixth of our gross domestic product Because of its breadth diversity and unparalleled success U S agriculture is an inviting target for terrorists Not only are food supplies vital for feeding our own population and others around the world and important for the Nation s economic health but American agriculture is a vivid example of the capabilities of modern scientific farming Intelligence reports indicate that a number of countries have active research programs that could produce biological agents to threaten crops and livestock Naturally occurring outbreaks of diseases signal the devastation that could result from a carefully choreographed intentional release Thus the recent Foot and mouth disease epidemics in Taiwan and Great Britain
