Women in Agriculture and Rural Life, 1998 Gender, Lineage, And Ethnicity In Southern Africa Jean Davison, 1997 Based on extensive fieldwork this study telescopes how lineage ideologies are constructed and change over time in the Zambezi River region where matriliney and patriliney coexist The author challenges the notion that patrilineality has subsumed matrilineal formations and demonstrates that despite colonial policies that privileged patrilineal gender relations of production a preference that was extended by the postcolonial states matrilineal relations of production have been adroitly sustained and even dominate in large parts of Malawi northern Mozambique and parts of Zambia and Zimbabwe Looking specifically at the linkages between gender and ethnicity in the construction of lineage ideologies the author offers a comparative study of women s changing status in the region and explores the implications for development policies at both the local and state levels Abstracts of Public Administration, Development, and Environment ,1997 Women Farmers' Participation in Agriculture and Extension in Sub-Saharan Africa Susan M. Masagasi,2002 Power, Gender, and Social Change in Africa Muna Ndulo,Margaret Grieco,2009 Gender plays a hugely significant and too often under considered role in predicting how accessible resources such as education wage based employment physical and mental health care adequate nutrition and housing will be to an individual or community According to a 2001 World Bank report titled Engendering Development Through Gender Equality in Rights Resources and Voice enormous disparities exist between men and women in terms of basic rights and the power to determine the future both in Africa and around the globe A better understanding of the links between gender public policy and development outcomes would allow for more effective policy formulation and implementation at many levels This book through its discussion of the challenges achievements and lessons learned in efforts to attain gender equality sheds light on these important issues The book contains chapters from an interdisciplinary group of scholars including sociologists economists political scientists scholars of law anthropologists historians and others The work includes analysis of strategic gender initiatives case studies research and policies as well as conceptual and theoretical pieces With its format of ideas resources and recorded experiences as well as theoretical models and best practices the book is an important contribution to academic and political discourse on the intricate links between gender power and social change in Africa and around the world Rebuilding Africa's Capacity for Agricultural Development ,2004 Women in Agriculture in Developing Countries Lutishoor Salisbury,1990 Gender, Environmental Degradation and Development Gregor Büchner,1991 Africa Insight ,1996 Agriculture and Human Values ,1984 Women Farmers Patrick Webb,2001 The book derives from a meeting of more than 120 scientists politicians and practitioners from 34 countries people of very diverse backgrounds who came together to discuss the extent of gains made by rural women after 25 years of increasingly gendered development It was a time to ask whether agricultural interventions projects or policies initiated funded and implemented in the name of women s development had made any difference The general conclusion was yes But neither as much as needed nor as sustainable as hoped for Research reported in this volume shows that women do not automatically gain from development interventions even if they were explicitly singled out for attention and gains for women in one area of their life can entail losses in another Gender Issues in Integrated Pest Management in African Agriculture C. Malena,1994 In Africa women farmers are generally responsible for pest management activities Research has shown that the technological needs and priorities of women farmers differ from those of men but their specific needs are rarely addressed in the research and development of agricultural technology Women s access to new technologies is seriously undermined owing to the failure of extension systems to establish contacts with women farmers The book discusses the gender related socio economic factors that influence the creation adoption and effective implementation of IPM technologies
