Aging of U.S. Air Force Aircraft National Research Council, Division on Engineering and Physical Sciences, National Materials Advisory Board, Commission on Engineering and Technical Systems, Committee on Aging of U.S. Air Force Aircraft, 1997-09-30 Many of the aircraft that form the backbone of the U S Air Force operational fleet are 25 years old or older A few of these will be replaced with new aircraft but many are expected to remain in service an additional 25 years or more This book provides a strategy to address the technical needs and priorities associated with the Air Force s aging airframe structures It includes a detailed summary of the structural status of the aging force identification of key technical issues recommendations for near term engineering and management actions and prioritized near term and long term research recommendations

The Maintenance Costs of Aging Aircraft Matthew C. Dixon, 2006 The U S Air Force is grappling with the challenge of aging fleets and the optimal time to replace them This monograph examines commercial aviation data to draw inferences about aging aircraft that may be relevant to the Air Force It focuses on aging effects i e how aircraft maintenance costs change as aircraft grow older Although commercial aircraft clearly differ from military aircraft the aging effect estimates might help the Air Force to project changing maintenance costs over time

Aging Aircraft Maintenance Kenneth M. Mead, 1991 Aging Aircraft U. S. Government Accountability Office (, 2013-06 GAO assessed the Federal Aviation Administration s FAA efforts to ensure the safety of aging commercial aircraft GAO found that FAA 1 sponsored a June 1988 international conference on aging aircraft after an accident involving an aging aircraft s structural failure 2 and the airline industry initiated many promising actions to respond to conference recommendations and hosted a second conference to discuss those actions 3 lacked a comprehensive plan for coordinating and evaluating initiatives to ensure participants awareness of all activities and facilitate oversight of joint initiatives and 4 could use its resources more effectively by developing hands on aircraft inspection approaches to supplement paperwork reviews of maintenance records analyzing trend data on aircraft maintenance and repair and assessing the impact of the potential capacity shortage in the aircraft repair industry on the FAA inspection work force

Aging aircraft. Fleet planning and maintenance Sebastian Wagner, 2014-05-12 Seminar paper from the year 2014 in the subject Engineering Aerospace Technology grade 1 3 University of Applied Sciences Wildau Wildau Institute of Technology course Aviation Management 2012 language English abstract Indeed the majority of airlines are faced with the challenge of aging fleets and when it might be optimal to replace older aircraft Well any discussion of the wisdom of retaining capital equipment is usually based on economic arguments In a competitive environment airlines are continuously obliged to improve their business and equipment to stay profitable The prediction of future maintenance costs of the own fleet is an integral element of prospective budgeting projections on the other hand they serve as a vital part within aircraft replacement calculations For example if the costs of maintaining the existing equipment on a timely basis exceeds the capital interest and amortization charges on replacement equipment the decision to buy a sort of replacement is straightforward In most cases the substitute equipment even offers an improved productivity as well Dixon 2006 p 1 Beside any debate concerning costs and efficiency flight safety considerations also enter into the discussion especially in the field of aviation The question to repair or replace is an ongoing decision making process for the maintenance department of every airline operator Now the key questions to be answered in this context are Is it possible to describe a standard airplane service life and how does the fleet age of world s leading airlines look like How does the process of maintenance develop over an aircraft s whole life cycle and can necessary costs be estimated What can be done technically to keep aging effects of aircraft under control and when might be the right time to withdraw an aircraft from service In order to answer the abundance of questions my term paper is divided into an economic based part including compiled data and statistics and a more technical part In the beginning this paper investigates the ordinary economic life of commercial airplanes Additionally I m going to inspect exemplary the average fleet age of world s leading airlines In the second stage I am going to describe how to estimate maintenance costs of aircraft that grow older Further I wanted to clarify technical aspects and problems that might occur more frequently with the rising age of an aircraft

Aging Aircraft Raymond Pyles,2003 To help improve the Air Force s ability to foresee the implications for safety aircraft availability and cost of its plans to retain aircraft fleets for service lives that may be as long as 80 years and to identify actions that will mitigate or avoid some of the more severe consequences this study measures how the USAF aircraft fleets ages relate to maintenance and modification workloads and material consumption Aging Aircraft United States.

Challenges and Issues with the Further Aging of U.S. Air Force Aircraft J. R. Gebman,2009 Over the next 20 years the further aging of already old aircraft will introduce challenges and issues for aircraft operators The technical challenges relate to structures propulsion and systems The institutional challenges include limitations on independent verification of fleet status and future condition and on information needed for engineering analyses including risk assessment and an overall scarcity of resources Nondestructive Evaluation of Aging Aircraft, Airports, and Aerospace Hardware ,1999

Government Accountability Office (G,U. S. Government Accountability Office (,2013-06 GAO reviewed issues regarding aging aircraft focusing on 1 the status of Federal Aviation Administration FAA and aviation industry actions to respond to the problem of aging aircraft and 2 FAA opportunities to more actively deal with emerging aircraft maintenance problems GAO found that FAA and the aviation industry have taken many actions in response to the recommendations of a 1988 international conference on aging aircraft but FAA should develop a unified plan to enhance coordination and oversight and should report periodically to Congress on the progress toward accomplishing the plan s goals GAO also found that FAA could enhance air safety by 1 achieving more hands on aircraft inspection to supplement its paperwork review of maintenance records 2 effectively utilizing its service difficulty reporting database to develop airworthiness directives identify industry repair trends and allocate inspection resources and 3 dealing with the emerging problem of capacity shortage in the aircraft repair industry

Aging Aircraft: Implications for Programmed Depot Maintenance and Engine-Support Costs

,1999 RAND Project AIR FORCE S long term interest in the topic of aging aircraft was rekindled in 1994 when we participated in the Air Force Scientific Advisory Board Summer Study that raised technical concerns about the viability of retaining certain aircraft past their original design lives In 1997 the National Research Council s report on aging USAF aircraft reinforced those concerns At that time we initiated a modest Air Force sponsored research effort focused on emerging technical challenges for aircraft maintenance activities Last summer we built on that technical background to examine the potential effects that aging aircraft would have on the costs of programmed depot maintenance PDM and engine support The results of that work are documented in the annotated briefing that has been made available to the subcommittee This year we have broadened our review to cover other support and modernization activities where aircraft age may affect costs and readiness
