Bibliography of Scientific and Industrial Reports ,1946 German Heavy Fighting Vehicles of the Second World War Kenneth W. Estes,2018-04-17 The German army faced tanks of superior size armor and firepower from the outset of World War II Although their Panzerwaffen handled the Polish campaign war with France meant confronting superior heavy and medium tanks like the Char B and Somua with 47 mm high velocity cannon that penetrated German tank armor with ease French infantry disposed of effective antitank weapons and a portion of their 75 mm field guns were detailed as antitank guns Even greater challenges emerged with the Russo German War for the Germans had no initial answer to the KV 1 heavy tank and T 34 medium The successive technical shocks of superior tanks introduced by each side produced a gun armor race that continued in some manner even after the war s end The Germans placed a premium on technological quality and superiority over mass production for which their industry and arguably their regime remained rather unsuited Not satisfied with the advantage they obtained with the Tiger and Panther series tanks the army leadership and Adolf Hitler himself pushed for larger and more powerful tanks than had ever been built

The History of the Panzerjäger Thomas Anderson,2020-11-26 The German Panzerjäger or Panzerjägertruppe was one of the most innovative fighting arms of World War II and its story has never properly been told until now Many books have focused on an element of the story the Hetzer Jagdpanzer and Jagdpanther but this two volume series represents the first time that the whole history of the development and organization of Nazi Germany s anti tank force has been revealed This second volume takes up the story in the mid war years and follows the development of the Panzerjäger describing the innovative new vehicles such as the Ferdinand Elefant and Nashorn German Armoured Fighting Vehicle specialist Thomas Anderson also analyses the key role it performed in the War in the Desert and across the Eastern Front and ultimately in the defence of the Reich itself Packed with previously unpublished wartime photographs combat reports and detailed charts and statistics this book offers an

German Heavy Fighting Vehicles of the Second World War Kenneth Estes,2018-01-19 The German army faced a gun armor race and placed a premium on technological quality and superiority over mass production The army and Adolf Hitler pushed for larger and more powerful tanks than had ever been built The heaviest tanks and assault guns developed and fielded by Germany continue to capture interest confirmed by current restorations German Anti-tank Guns (PAK) Luca Stefano Cristini,2024 The German anti tank weapons used in WWII were divided into several classes The main class which we will deal with in the following volume comprises guns built specifically for anti tank missions and is in turn divided into three groups guns of conventional German design guns built with conical bore systems and anti tank weapons captured from the enemy The orthodox German cannon in the first group are designed to pierce enemy armour at maximum distances using relatively heavy projectiles at high velocity The cone core cannon group on the other hand were designed to have greater mobility than conventional cannon while still being able to achieve the same armour penetration Finally the third group of anti tank weapons comprises all those weapons that the German army used during its conquests in the early years of the war The Germans used them mainly as reserve weapons

German Tank Destroyers Pierre Tiquet,2021-08-04 An unusually well detailed pictorial history of the entire class of vehicles including the Hornisse Jagdpanzer 38 Jagdpanzer IV and Elefant AMPS From the early days of World War II it was clear that the Wehrmacht s antitank units would need to be motorized as existing horse or automobile drawn units were too slow to be effective Initially antitank guns were mounted onto available usually obsolete tank chassis such as the Panzerj ger I and II However German engineers would soon turn to the heavy chassis of the Panzer IV the Panther and the Tiger for their tank hunters It became apparent during the invasion of France that enemy antitank guns were both more powerful and better armored and improvement became a priority during Barbarossa as German units faced off against the new Soviet tanks The appearance of the Soviet T 34 in July 1941 meant that the Germans had to quickly come up with something equally powerful The result was the motorized panzerj ger faster and more mobile than older towed versions This was followed in 1942 by the introduction of the 7 5cm gun Further designs and modifications were informed by reports from the front line Some of these conversions were very successful and resulted in fearsome tank destroyers deployed to great effect by the Wehrmacht The lightweight Hetzer for example was based on a modified Panzer 38 t and entered service in 1944 This small tank became Germany s main tank destroyer during the final stages of the war and would continue in use around the world even after 1945 Though they may not have looked that intimidating the Landser were soon won over and were comforted to have something reliable to stand between them and the Soviet tanks This account illustrated by hundreds of period photos examines the development and deployment of various original models led to a wide variety of guns. The name applies to a series of guns, the first one officially called the 88 cm Flak 18, the improved 88 cm Flak 36, and later the 88 cm Flak 37. Flak is a contraction of German Flugzeugabwehrkanone meaning aircraft defensive cannon, the original purpose of the eighty-eight. In informal German use, the guns were universally known as the Acht acht, eight eight, a contraction of Acht komma acht Zentimeter 88 cm. In English, flak became a generic term for ground anti-aircraft fire. The versatile carriage allowed the eighty-eight to be fired in a limited anti-tank mode when still on wheels and to be completely emplaced in only two and a half minutes. Its successful use as an improvised anti-tank gun led to the development of a tank gun based upon it. These related guns served as the main armament of tanks such as the Tiger I, the 88 cm KwK 36, with the KwK abbreviation standing for Kampfwagenkanone, Battle tank Cannon. In addition to these Krupp designs, Rheinmetall later created a more powerful anti-aircraft gun, the 88 cm Flak 41, which was produced in relatively small numbers. Krupp responded with another prototype of the long-barreled 88 mm gun, which was further developed into the anti-tank and tank destroyer 88 cm Pak 43 gun and turret-mounted 88 cm KwK 43 heavy tank gun.

Swinging the Sledgehammer U.S. Army Command and General Staff College, 2014-07-01. This thesis is a historical analysis of the combat effectiveness of the German schwere Panzer Abteilung or Heavy Tank Battalions during World War II. During the course of World War II, the German Army developed heavy tank battalions to fulfill the concept of breaking through enemy defenses so faster, lighter mechanized forces could exploit the rupture. These heavy tank battalions had several different tables of organization but were always centered around either the Tiger or the Tiger II tank. They fought in virtually every theater of Europe against every enemy of Germany. Ultimately, the German military created eleven Army and three Waffen SS heavy tank battalions. Of the Army battalions, the German command fielded ten as independent battalions which were allocated to Army Groups as needed. The German Army assigned the last heavy tank battalion as an organic unit of the elite Panzer Grenadier Division Grossdeutschland. The Waffen SS allocated all of their battalions to a different Waffen SS Corps. Because these units were not fielded until late in 1942, they did not participate in Germany's major offensive operations that dominated the early part of World War II. Germany's strategic situation after mid-1943 forced their military onto the defensive. Consequently, there are very few instances when heavy tank battalions attacked as a breakthrough force. During the latter part of the war, they were used in many different ways to provide defensive assistance along very wide frontages. This study assesses the German heavy tank battalions as generally effective, primarily because of the high kill ratio they achieved. However, based upon observations from a wide variety of examples, this study also outlines several areas where changes may have increased their effectiveness.
