William Ernest Henley

An Autumn In Hell:

An Autumn in Hell Dodge,2005-10-01 In less than a decade anyone using a typewriter has probably moved to a word processor and then a computer We have become a technological society in many other ways The majority of new jobs created today have a relation to technology in some fashion Earlier in the 1970 s and 1980 s the highest paid workers at any specific company were the ones in upper middle management positions They had worked their way up the ladder paying their dues so to speak with the company Now the highest paid are usually the most recently hired in the management information section programming or designing Older workers who do not have these new skills are being retired down sized or simply let go All of this thought has produced a lot of justified anxiety among the workers who fear that if and when they are cut or if they leave a job what will they do to get another one Lacking technological skills is only part of the problem the other part is marketing oneself to fit the needs of an employer in today s market It is entirely within the scope of this manuscript to offer advice on how to find a job perform the research that helps accomplish that and how to get the positive results you need The advice here is our advice We believe it works because we have seen it work It should work for you *Where the Hell's the Time Gone?
