

A photograph of an archaeologist wearing a pink visor and a dark jacket, kneeling on the ground. They are examining a human skeleton that has been partially excavated from the earth. The skeleton is lying on its side, with the ribcage and pelvis clearly visible. The surrounding soil is dark and appears to be a recent excavation site. In the background, there is a white object, possibly a bucket or a piece of equipment. The overall scene is dimly lit, suggesting an outdoor setting with some shade.
