Neurobiological Issues in Autism Eric Schopler, Gary B. Mesibov, 2013-11-22 As a division of the School of Medicine at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill TEACCH has always been involved in the latest biological research on autism and related developmental disabilities However until now there has not been sufficient information to justify a separate volume on this most important topic Recent advances both in our understanding of the brain and in the technology to facilitate the measurement of neurological functioning have stimulated significant growth which is reflected in this volume As with the preceding books in this series Current Issues in Autism this volume is based on one of the annual TEACCH conferences held in Chapel Hill each May The books are not simply published proceedings of the conference papers however Instead conference participants are asked to develop chapters around their presentations and other international experts whose work is beyond the scope of the conference but related to the major theme are asked to contribute as well These volumes are intended to provide the most current knowledge and professional practice available to us concerning major issues in autism

Central Cardiovascular Control D. Ganten, D. Pfaff, 2012-12-06 The most prominent function of the central nervous system is the control of motor functions by rapidly transmitted impulses through efferent cranial and spinal peripheral nerves Besides electrically transmitted neural impulses humoral mechanisms with more sustained actions are exercised by the brain and spinal cord to regulate body homeostasis Thus the brain may be regarded as an endocrine gland discharging neurohormones peptides either into the general circulation neurohypophyseal hormones or into the hypothalamo-adenohypophyseal portal circulation releasing and inhibiting hormones The brain therefore which is protected by the blood brain barrier from disturbing and potentially noxious exogenous and endogenous agents circulating in the blood has to have certain neurohemal regions beyond this barrier such as the neural lobe and the median eminence infundibulum where neurohormones have free access to the blood stream To regulate somatic and autonomic functions in the best possible way the central nervous system is highly dependent on feedback signals conveyed through somatic and visceral afferent nerves as well as on peripheral humoral signals such as peripheral hormones and other circulating substances that are under homeostatic regulation e.g. peptides amines electrolytes and other biologically active agents In this chapter the role of the blood brain barrier in the regulation of these substances will be discussed with special emphasis on the access through the blood brain barrier to cardiovascular centers
