Corrosion of Metals Helmut Kaesche, 2012-12-06 Corrosion due to water is one of the most significant and complex causes of damage to metallic products Written from the viewpoint of physical chemistry this authoritative and established text deals with the aqueous corrosion of metals Available for the first time in English Corrosion of Metal addressing engineers metallurgists physicists and chemists This self contained valuable reference comprehensively organizes and makes readily accessible the accumulated wealth of fundamental and applied knowledge The concentration is on the underlying essentials of corrosion and failure and the material is consistently presented in relation to practical applications to corrosion protection The first chapters introducing the physicochemical principles are ideal for students The following chapters provide an overview of the state of research for those familiar with the fundamentals An exhaustive bibliography and appendices conclude the volume An Introduction to Corrosion and Protection of Metals Gösta Wranglén, 1972 Organic

Inhibitors of Corrosion of Metals Y.I. Kuznetsov, 2013-06-29 Organic Inhibitors of Corrosion of Metals provides a detailed review of the various theories advanced to explain the mechanisms of organic inhibitors Author Yu I Kuznetsov explores the role of potential and charge of the metal the nature of the organic species used as the inhibitor and the function of the solvent The author draws connections between these key elements and the processes of passivation pitting synergism and complex formation This unique volume brings together the mechanistic and practical aspects of corrosion control by organic inhibitors Corrosion of Metals and Hydrogen-Related Phenomena J. Flis, 2016-01-11 It is estimated that about 40% of the annual production of metals is used to repair or replace materials damaged by corrosion Corrosion causes waste of the natural material and energy resources it creates serious materials problems for many technologies and adversely affects almost every area of engineering The use of metals in various aggressive environments has resulted in an extremely wide diversity of corrosion problems This book presents a collection of concise reviews written by experts in the field on selected topics of metallic corrosion and on some aspects of interaction of hydrogen with metals A comprehensive range of problems is examined including localized corrosion high temperature corrosion in liquid metals and molten salts transport control in corrosion processes entry of hydrogen into metals hydrogen embrittlement and hydrogen reactions with metals The variety of topics covered in the book will provide corrosion scientists engineers university lecturers and students alike with an interdisciplinary approach to solving problems of materials degradation and surface processes in metal corrosion

since the previous edition was published includes A new Chapter on damage nucleation A new Chapter on Very High Cycle Fatigue A new Chapter on fatigue testing and fatigue S N curve determination Expanded analysis of surface treatments and inclusions effect on fatigue Expanded treatment of volume process effect on fatigue Expanded treatments of corrosion and hydrogen embrittlement In addition to these enhancements it includes a detailed treatment of Phenomenology and morphological aspects of fatigue Surface treatments conditions and nonmetallic inclusions effects on fatigue Stress and strain based fatigue analysis Mean stress and notch effect on fatigue Cumulative damage and multiaxial fatigue Probabilistic analysis application to fatigue design Fatigue in welds Stress corrosion and hydrogen embrittlement Fracture mechanics application to fatigue and corrosion It serves as a valuable and needful information source on the desktop of anyone involved with fatigue and corrosion in metals

An Introduction to Corrosion and Protection of Metals Gosta

Wranglen,1985-05-15 Corrosion may be defined as an unintentional attack on a material through reaction with a surrounding medium The term can refer to a process or to the damage caused by such a process According to this general definition materials other than metals such as ceramics plastics or concrete may also be subject to corrosion or corrode When no particular reference is made to the material however it is normally understood that a metal is being attacked It is entirely in this limited sense that the term is used in this book There are good reasons for treating the corrosion of metals separately apart from deterioration or decay of other materials Since metals have a high electric conductivity their corrosion is usually of an electrochemical nature The chemical deterioration of electrically non conducting materials such as plastics and ceramics is governed by other physico chemical principles It is necessary to devote more attention to metallic corrosion nowadays than earlier due to 1 An increased use of metals within all fields of technology 2 The use for special applications e g within the atomic energy field of rare and expensive metals whose preservation requires particular precautions 3 A more corrosive environment due to the increasing pollution of air and water 4 The use of metallic constructions of more slender dimensions which do not tolerate corrosive attacks to the same extent as did the heavy constructions used in the old days
