Drums Of Memory An Autobiography:

The Drums of Memory Stephen Hastings, 1994 Günter Grass and the Genders of German Memory Timothy Bruce Malchow, 2021

The first book to examine the connection between gender and memory in Grass's oeuvre which is especially timely in light of current concerns about male privilege. Günter Grass 1927-2015 was a fixture at the heart of German cultural life a self-styled spokesman of the Kulturnation cultural nation who imagined it linking him to canonical male literary figures and their authority. He was also the object of valid feminist criticism a rigid conception of gender permeates his works belying his professed skepticism toward ideologies. A heterosexual male Grass lent his representative persona a natural veneer by appropriating his era's gendered discursive constructs including Heimat the Bildungsroman and narratives about German wartime victims and perpetrators. Such appropriation elevated his remembering artist's masculinity above that of the status quo's defenders and exploiters of memory. This book is the first to evaluate the connection between gender and memory in Grass's oeuvre and its legacy in light of current concerns about male privilege. It highlights his breakthrough novel The Tin Drum 1959 and his memoir Peeling the Onion 2006. The former establishes the gendered persona that Grass would develop in subsequent decades to relate contemporary issues to Nazi era memories. The latter reclaims the novel's autobiographical material but fails to account for his decades-long silence about having served in the Nazi Waffen SS. Instead it foregrounds his mourning for his mother allowing for a more personal reading of his oeuvre and its gendered imagery of current concerns about male privilege. It highlights his breakthrough novel The Tin Drum 1959 and his memoir Peeling the Onion 2006. This dissertation examines the evolution of Civil War memories in Rutherford County Tennessee from the 1860s to the present. It explores how race, gender, and regional identities shaped individuals' perspectives on the war, commemorative events, and organizations, and the development of historic sites such as Stones River National Battlefield. This study demonstrates how civilians and soldiers began to understand and commemorate this war before the conflict ended. It discusses the two main local commemorative groups, Union and Confederate, and how they evolved over time. This dissertation complicates the history of Civil War battlefields managed by the federal government by investigating the relationships between Stones River National Battlefield, African American landowners and park neighbors, and local white Confederate sympathizers. Investigating Confederate memory on a local level exposes the unequal struggle for leadership of this movement between white women and men. Although women largely created and sustained Confederate commemoration in the county, men usurped their projects and positions of authority during times like the 1890s and 1960s when political and social developments menaced white male supremacy. Gendered disputes between white men and women helped transform Confederate commemoration over time from a culture of mourning to a celebration of white soldiers' heroism and finally into a form of entertainment that glorified the Confederate past and white male supremacy. The Hollow Drum Arnold Kemp, 1993

Since the war, Scotland has been profoundly altered. Its native tradition of entrepreneurial capitalism has disappeared. Its heavy industries have rapidly declined. It has become a branch economy soliciting international investment. Its crowded old cities have spread themselves into the country dormitories. The grip of the Kirk has been much weakened. The Conservatives have slumped from a historic high water mark in 1955 to their present low ebb. The Nationalists come and go, but Labour's strength seems geological.
