based psychology informed by the hermetic logic of alchemy has not been followed which was already noted by Jung himself My later and more important work as it seems to me is still left untouched in its primordial obscurity The present study is based decidedly on the stance of mature Jung and his very different views about dreams His most crucial insights in this regard include that in dreams the soul speaks about itself not about the dreamer that the dream is its own interpretation and therefore needs to be circumambulated rather than translated into the language of psychology and everyday life and that dream images have everything they need within themselves rather than needing associations from the dreamer's daily life This book discusses in detail what all this means in practice and what it demands of the psychologist A decisive transposition away from ordinary consciousness a crossing to the other side of the river is required of the consciousness that wants to approach dreams psychologically Numerous aspects of dreams and special questions that come up in working with dreams are discussed At the end of this book our working with dreams is situated in the wider question of the psychological task in general by exploring Jung's insistence that psychology has to transcend the consulting room Hillman's move From mirror to window and in Plato's parable the revolutionary move out of and return to the cave While limited to the topic of dreams this book may also serve as an indirect introduction to an understanding of psychology as a psychology with soul Jung or as the discipline of interiority Mediations Leroy A.
