ABSTRACT

Introduction: Child Psychology helps us to understand the changes that occurred from childhood and the way to handle it. They are considered as proposals emanated by great authors who played an important role in every individual's development from birth. Child's behaviour management in medical or dental clinic is an essential requirement to complete the health care of a pediatric patient.

Aim: To successfully handle a pediatric patient in a clinical setup, one should have sufficient knowledge of psychological and personality development at different stages of childhood. Anxiety is a common problem that affects people of all ages, most prominently appear in childhood and adolescence.

Conclusion: It not only has a distressing effect on the child but also their family which can affect the overall well-being of a child. This article gives an overview of various psychological stages which a human undergo from childhood till death.

Key Words: Autonomy, Behaviour, Challenge, Ego, Psychosocial, Psychosexual, Relationship, Trust.

INTRODUCTION

Child psychology is the science that deals with the study of a child's mind and how it function. It also deals with mental power or an interaction between the conscious and sub-conscious constituents in a child. A child should not only be studied or treated as embryonic adults, but we should know their talents and we should be efficient to understand their actions and the reason behind them. Children are amazing in every way. Understanding pediatric patients and their psychology is an important part of pediatric dentistry. A child's dental health is very important as poor dental health can affect the overall health of a developing child.¹ Parent though they help to care for baby's teeth and gums, regular trips to a pediatric dentist is essential to incorporate proper oral care which further prevents the risk of dental disease. The dentist or a paediatrician fails in their treatment if they couldn't satisfy or fulfil the requirements of the uncooperative or psychologically challenged child. Thus, child psychology is important in all medical fields which always has a special role.^{2,3}

CHILD PSYCHOLOGY

Child psychology is important for a dentist to know the pediatric individuals better and understand them psychologically about their behaviour, to render better dental service efficiently, through effective communication and incorporate confidence to the child and their parent, which further can reinforce better working environment for the dental team and the patient. Various theories were introduced in 1907 to understand the stages of child psychology.

They are classified as follows (Elbers., 1906)⁴

- A. Psychodynamic Theory:
Psychosexual Concept by Sigmund Freud in 1905
Psychosocial / Personality development Theory by Erik Erikson in 1963
