Archaeological Pathways To Historic Site Development:

Archaeological Pathways to Historic Site Development Stanley South,2012-12-06 In this book I walk with the reader along the path that bothered me that some of my colleagues in their archaeological pathways traveled by many reports of archaeological activity on documented researchers in the process of historic site historic sites never mention finding evidence of previous American Indian occupation Sites development The sponsors historians archaeologists and administrators who have selected by Europeans usually on high ground bordering the deep water channel of navigatable traveled those pathways may find familiar much of what I say here The pathways exploring the past streams are those also once preferred by Native Americans for the access to environmental involve research in documents and the archaeological record using the best methods of resources they afford How could Native both in an attempt to understand the material American material culture not be present on such culture remains left behind not only by explorers sites and colonists from Europe and Africa but also by I once asked a well known archaeological Native Americans who lived in the environment for colleague why it was that such evidence did not appear in his reports from such sites and the reply millenia before those strangers appeared on the scene In explaining the archaeological record of was Gh I find all kinds of Indian things on the American Indians I lean on not only archaeological historic sites I dig but that s not why I m there Megadrought in the Carolinas John S. Cable,2020-01-21 Considers the Native American abandonment of the South Carolina coast A prevailing enigma in American archaeology is why vast swaths of land in the Southeast and Southwest were abandoned between AD 1200 and 1500 The most well known abandonments occurred in the Four Corners and Mimbres areas of the Southwest and the central Mississippi valley in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries and in southern Arizona and the Ohio Valley during the fifteenth century In Megadrought in the Carolinas The Archaeology of Mississippian Collapse Abandonment and Coalescence John S Cable demonstrates through the application of innovative ceramic analysis that yet another fifteenth century abandonment event took place across an area of some 34 5 million acres centered on the South Carolina coast Most would agree that these sweeping changes were at least in part the consequence of prolonged droughts associated with a period of global warming known as the Medieval Climatic Anomaly Cable strengthens this inference by showing that these events correspond exactly with the timing of two different geographic patterns of megadrought as defined by modern climate models Cable extends his study by testing the proposition that the former residents of the coastal zone migrated to surrounding interior regions where the effects of drought were less severe Abundant support for this expectation is found in the archaeology of these regions including evidence of accelerated population growth crowding and increased regional hostilities Another important implication of immigration is the eventual coalescence of ethnic and or culturally different social groups and the ultimate transformation of societies into new cultural syntheses Evidence for this process is not yet well documented in the Southeast but Cable draws on his familiarity with the drought related Puebloan intrusions into the

Hohokam Core Area of southern Arizona during the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries to suggest strategies for examining coalescence in the Southeast The narrative concludes by addressing the broad implications of late prehistoric societal collapse for today s human propelled global warming era that portends similar but much more long lasting consequences

Histories of Southeastern Archaeology Shannon Tushingam,Jane Hill,Charles H. McNutt,2002-03-18 This volume provides a comprehensive broad based overview including first person accounts of the development and conduct of archaeology in the Southeast over the past three decades Histories of Southeastern Archaeology originated as a symposium at the 1999 Southeastern Archaeological Conference SEAC organized in honor of the retirement of Charles H McNutt following 30 years of teaching anthropology Written for the most part by members of the first post depression generation of southeastern archaeologists this volume offers a window not only into the archaeological past of the United States but also into the hopes and despairs of archaeologists who worked to write that unrecorded history or to test scientific theories concerning culture The contributors take different approaches each guided by experience personality and location as well as by the legislation that shaped the practical conduct of archaeology in their area Despite the state by state approach there are certain common themes such as the effect or lack thereof of changing theory in Americanist archaeology the explosion of contract archaeology and its relationship to academic archaeology goals achieved or not achieved and the common ground of SEAC This book tells us how we learned what we now know about the Southeast s unwritten past Of obvious interest to professionals and students of the field this volume will also be sought after by historians political scientists amateurs and anyone interested in the South Additional reviews A unique publication that presents numerous historical topical and personal perspectives on the archaeological heritage of the Southeast Southeastern Archaeology Handbook of North American Indians, Volume 14: Southeast William Sturtevant,1978 Encyclopedic summary of prehistory history cultures and political and social aspects of native peoples in Siberia Alaska the Canadian Arctic and Greenland The Review of Archaeology ,2001 Carolina Comments ,2006 WEST MICHIGAN ENVIRONMENTAL ACTION COUNCIL V MICHIGAN NATURAL RESOURCES COMMISSION, 405 MICH 741 (1979) ,1979 60800 The Archaeology of Town Creek Edmond A. Boudreaux,Edmond A. Boudreaux (III),2007-11-04 Provides new insights into the community pattern and leadership roles at a major Mississippian archaeological site The sequence of change for public architecture during the Mississippian period may reflect a centralization of political power through time In the research presented here some of the community level assumptions attributed to the appearance of Mississippian mounds are tested against the archaeological record of the Town Creek site the remains of a town located on the northeastern edge of the Mississippian culture area In particular the archaeological record of Town Creek is used to test the idea that the appearance of Mississippian platform mounds was accompanied by the centralization of political authority in the hands of a powerful chief A compelling argument has been made that mounds were the seats and symbols of political power within Mississippian societies While platform mounds have been a part of Southeastern Native American communities since at least 100 B C around A D 400 leaders in some communities began to place their houses on top of earthen mounds an act that has been interpreted as an attempt to legitimize personal authority by a community leader through the appropriation of a powerful traditional community oriented symbol Platform mounds at a number of sites were preceded by a distinctive type of building called an earthlodge a structure with earth embanked walls and an entrance indicated by short parallel wall trenches Earthlodges in the Southeast have been interpreted as places where a council of community leaders came together to make decisions based on consensus In contrast to the more inclusive function proposed for pre-mound earthlodges it has been argued that access to the buildings on top of Mississippian platform mounds was limited to a much smaller subset of the community If this was the case and if ground level earthlodges were more accessible than mound summit structures then access to leaders and leadership may have decreased through time Excavations at the Town Creek archaeological site have shown that the public architecture there follows the earthlodge to platform mound sequence that is well known across the South Appalachian subarea of the Mississippian world The clear changes in public architecture coupled with the extensive exposure of the site s domestic sphere make Town Creek an excellent case study for examining the relationship among changes in public architecture and leadership within a Mississippian society
