

Princeton U_Matter Wellness Self-Assessment

Wellness is not merely the absence of illness or distress – it is a lifelong process of making decisions to live a more balanced and meaningful life. There are always opportunities for enhancing your wellness. A good way to start is by evaluating your current state and establishing systems to guide you towards a fuller sense of well-being.

You can use this self-assessment tool to determine the areas of wellness (emotional, environmental, intellectual, occupational, physical, social, and spiritual) where you are thriving, as well as those that may need greater attention. Taking this assessment will also help you to reflect on components of health that you may not have considered before.

INSTRUCTIONS

1. Answer all the questions for each of the seven wellness dimensions.
2. Tally your points for each section and use the guide to interpret the scores.
3. Complete an action plan via the "UMatter Wellness Guide".

Explore more information about each dimension of wellness and on-campus resources available to help you by visiting <http://umatter.princeton.edu/education-matter/creating-your-2016-wellness-wheel-assessment>

©2016 U_Matter. The Princeton U_Matter Wellness Self-Assessment is a tool created by Princeton University's U_Matter initiative. It is intended for individual-level self-reflection and goal setting. In its current form, it is not a validated tool and should not be used for research or diagnostic purposes. It is not an objective assessment of wellness, but rather individual perceptions of wellness. We do not support use in a group-based setting. Permission for appropriate use, outside of individual reflection, is required.

Emotional Wellness: understanding your own feelings and expressing emotions in a constructive way, and having the ability to deal with stress and cope with life's challenges:
