Giving Some Account of What It Was by Nature of What It Was Made by Man and of Some of the Men Who Made It An examination of the records of the county for some information awakened curiosity in regard to its early settlement and gradually led to a more extensive search The fruits of this labor it was thought might be worthy of notice and productive of pleasure on a wider scale There is a strong desire in most men to know who were their forefathers whence they came where they lived and how they were occupied during their earthly sojourn This desire is natural apart from the requirements of business or the promptings of vanity The same inquisitiveness is felt in regard to places Who first entered the farms that checker the surrounding landscape cut down the forests that once covered it and built the habitations scattered over its bosom With the young who are absorbed in the engagements of the present and the hopes of the future this feeling may not act with much energy but as they advance in life their thoughts turn back with growing persistency to the past and they begin to start questions which perhaps there is no means of answering How many there are who long to ascertain the name of some ancestor or some family connection but the only person in whose breast the coveted knowledge was lodged has gone beyond the reach of all inquiry How many interesting facts of personal or domestic concern could have been communicated by a parent or grandparent but their story not being told at the opportune season they have gone down irrecoverably in the gulf of oblivion Public affairs are abundantly recorded Not only are they set forth in the countless journals of the day but scores of ready pens are waiting to embody them in more permanent form in histories of our own times Private events those connected with individuals and families are less frequently committed to writing About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works
