

10 Reasons You Didn't Get The Job

1

You fixated on what the job could do for you.
Better to talk about what your skills can do for the company.

2

Hiring manager feels like you may not stay.
Emphasize why you want this job and how it meets your long term goals.

3

You're giving non-verbal clues.
Work on being comfortable at interviews, make eye contact, give a strong handshake.

4

You didn't "click."
Practice being authentic, the real you, someone they would definitely find great to work with.

5

You overshared.
Don't bring up details (and grievances) about your past that do not relate to why you should be hired.

6

You were overqualified.
Check job descriptions carefully before applying; if you think you may be overqualified, address this at the interview.

7

You cast your net too wide.
Hone in on the positions, location and work conditions you want rather than applying for every possibly related opening.

8

The job description was not accurate.
Make it clear in your resume and cover letter the job that you are qualified and prepared to do; that will help everyone not waste time.

9

Someone else was more qualified.
It happens. Know that you did your best, and there will be other opportunities.

10

You didn't tell enough stories.
Write down a few stories or experiences you can highlight in an interview and practice telling them.
