

Come Back, Salmon

by Molly Cone

Introduce Come Back, Salmon

A group of dedicated students from the Jackson Elementary School in Everett, Washington, clean and restock a local stream to bring back the salmon that once spawned there.

Get kids curious about Come Back, Salmon. If you have an aquarium, use it to explore what fish need to survive (clean water, air [oxygen], food). Or, bring in a fish bowl with small fish, like goldfish. Teach the children to care for the fish.

Discuss Come Back, Salmon

Come Back, Salmon is a fascinating and remarkable story that will captivate kids. It takes approximately 10 minutes to read two chapters, so the book can be read in three book club meetings. However, you may find that your kids are eager to hear more. If so, read the book in two club meetings with about 15–20 minutes of reading each. During the course of reading Come Back, Salmon, kids will have time to learn and practice taking care of fish (see above) and to learn about nature in their community. Ask Are there areas near us that need cleaning or some other type of care? Were those areas once different? What happened?

After reading Come Back, Salmon aloud, help kids understand the plot and connect with the characters by asking:

1. Why did the kids have a hard time believing Mr. King when he told them Pigeon Creek was once a clear, clean stream? Look at the picture of the rubbish that was in the stream. What do you see?
2. Why did some local people think the kids would not be able to bring back the salmon? Have you ever done something that people did not think you could do? What was it?
3. Pigeon Creek changed dramatically in the time it took Mr. King to grow from boyhood to adulthood. Can you think of some things that have changed from when your parents were young? For instance, how did your parents, grandparents, or older friends listen to music, write papers, or visit far away places? How were their clothes different from those worn today? Do they remember stores, parks, or streets that are no longer there?
4. Explore some of the vocabulary from the story, such as spawn, silt, watershed, environment, pollution. (spawn—fish producing young by laying eggs; silt—deposits of sand, tiny rocks, and other sediments; watershed—areas that drain into a body of water, such as a river)

Chapters 3 & 4

1. Look at the pictures of the salmon (Coho) eggs as they develop. Can you see the eyes? What changes in each of the pictures? When do the developing salmon start to look like fish?
2. How do you think the kids felt when they released the fish? (Elicit a range of responses—sad, hopeful, happy). Why do you think they felt that way?
3. Now that the kids have put the small fry in Pigeon Creek, do you think the fry will grow, swim to the ocean, and come back to Pigeon Creek? Why?
