This book bridges the gap between human connection and computational intelligence, showing that the way machines learn is deeply tied to how humans build trust, nurture relationships, and resolve conflicts. From emotional intelligence to diversity and inclusion, from networking strategies to organizational relational capability, this book offers a fresh perspective: learning is not just about algorithms but about the dynamic interplay of communication, adaptation, and growth. Whether you're a professional seeking to strengthen career networks, a leader aiming to build organizational resilience, or a curious reader fascinated by the parallels between human and machine learning, this book provides practical insights and thought-provoking frameworks.
