Animal Conflict:

Animal Conflict Felicity A. Huntingford, 2013-03-07 In the past twenty years there have been many new developments in the study of animal behaviour for example more sophisticated methods of neurophysiology more precise techniques for assessing hormonal levels more accurate methods for studying animals in the wild and on the functional side the growth of behavioural ecology with its use of optimality theory and game theory In addition there has been a burgeoning number of studies on a wide range of species The study of aggression has benefited greatly from these developments this is reflected in the appearance of a number of specialized texts both on behavioural ecology and on physiology and genetics However these books have often been collections of papers by specialists for specialists No one book brings together for the non specialist all the diverse aspects of aggression including behavioural ecology genetics development evolution and neurophysiology Neither has there been a comparative survey dealing with all these aspects Therefore one of our aims in writing this book was to fill in these gaps Another of our aims was to put aggression into context with respect to other aspects of an animal's lifestyle and in particular to other ways in which animals deal with conflicts of interest Aggressive behaviour does not occur in a biological vacuum It both influences and is influenced by the animal's ecological and social environment so we consider both the complex antecedent conditions in which aggressive behaviour occurs and its ramifying consequences in the ecosystem

Planning and decision-making in human-wildlife conflict and coexistence Silvio Marchini, Alexandra Zimmermann, Katia Maria P. M. B. Ferraz, Jenny Anne Glikman, 2023-03-27

People and Wildlife, Conflict or Co-existence? Rosie Woodroffe, Simon Thirgood, Alan Rabinowitz, 2005-08-25 Human wildlife conflict is a major issue in conservation As people encroach into natural habitats and as conservation efforts restore wildlife to areas where they may have been absent for generations contact between people and wild animals is growing Some species even the beautiful and endangered can have serious impacts on human lives and livelihoods Tigers kill people elephants destroy crops and African wild dogs devastate sheep herds left unattended Historically people have responded to these threats by killing wildlife wherever possible and this has led to the endangerment of many species that are difficult neighbours The urgent need to conserve such species however demands coexistence of people and endangered wildlife This book presents a variety of solutions to human wildlife conflicts including novel and traditional farming practices offsetting the costs of wildlife damage through hunting and tourism and the development of local and national policies

Why do animals fight? When do they avoid it? Christine

Langhoff,2003-05-03 Essay from the year 2003 in the subject Biology Behaviour grade 2 1 B Oxford University New College language English abstract Conflict is very common in the animal kingdom In many cases conflict between animals is resolved by displaying and actual fighting is avoided but there are also many examples of fighting some of which end up in the death of the opponent From observations of animal conflict it is clear that some circumstances are more conducive to fighting than others that animals do not always fight when given the opportunity and that individuals vary in the readiness with which they resort to fighting Such differences in agonistic behaviour often reflect an animal s chances of winning or getting injured and the importance of the issue concerned I am going to examine why animals fight and when they avoid it Animal Conflict Felicity A. Urban wildlife management is a town planning subject It is logical and important to relate the animal and human conflict seen all over the world as a phenomenon which is applicable to all types of human settlements despite the diversities and complexities of cultures societal structures laws value systems religions and so on A universal principle or theory governs and applies to all cities which define these conditions and phenomena creating the conflict or coexistence This book investigates the niches of one of the key urban animals from a syntactic semantic and pragmatic perspective and explores how these niches are naturally synonymous to similar patterns structures and compositions within human settlements It explores and defines the demographic patterns thresholds and phenomenon which leads to formation of the different levels and extremes of interaction between the species This forms a paradigm which classifies this conflict within the various disciplines and frameworks of urban ecology The focus is primarily on urban dogs it being a keystone species but is later related with other urban animals as well The premise for this approach is that history has shown how certain species have persuasively coexisted with humans for so many millennia yet a conflict happens between animals and humans and within humans over animals It is thus logical to believe that the forces which create this conflict cannot solely be natural to the species in question and have to come from outside from the settlement patterns of both species and the net resultant force and dynamics The book looks at these dichotomies in four distinct but interrelated ways It delves deep inside four niches which form the dynamics of any settlement spatial cultural ecological and economic and explores all scales at which the succession and evolution of animals take place in highly urbanized settlements
