Creating the Second Cold War Simon Dalby, 2016-10-06 The Cold War is over yet many attitudes and analyses typical of the period persisted in the strategic thinking of the Great Powers In this brilliantly original study Simon Dalby uses the conceptual tools of geopolitical analysis to uncover the essence of American strategic discourse Focussing on the period of the late 1970s he shows how Washington pressure groups political organisations and in particular the Committee on the Present Danger recreated a language of confrontation that deeply influenced Western attitudes towards the Soviet Union in ways that continue to shape foreign policy

Mapping the Cold War Timothy Barney, 2015-04-13 In this fascinating history of Cold War cartography Timothy Barney considers maps as central to the articulation of ideological tensions between American national interests and international aspirations Barney argues that the borders scales projections and other conventions of maps prescribed and constrained the means by which foreign policy elites popular audiences and social activists navigated conflicts between North and South East and West Maps also influenced how identities were formed in a world both shrunk by advancing technologies and marked by expanding and shifting geopolitical alliances and fissures Pointing to the necessity of how politics and values were spatialized in recent U S history Barney argues that Cold War era maps themselves had rhetorical lives that began with their conception and production and played out in their circulation within foreign policy circles and popular media Reflecting on the ramifications of spatial power during the period Mapping the Cold War ultimately demonstrates that even in the twenty first century American visions of the world and the maps that account for them are inescapably rooted in the anxieties of that earlier era

The Making of the Second Cold War Fred Halliday, 1986 We are living through the Second Cold War yet what is it Millions in East and West now fear a nuclear conflict yet confrontation and panic continue to obscure understanding of the processes that might trigger a hot war Fred Halliday presents a clearly written anatomy of these international tensions He identifies the chief cause of cold war as the globalized contest between the USA and USSR and the arms race in which these states are engaged He then explains the five main elements of the conflict the relative decline in US nuclear strategic superiority since the 1960s the new wave of Third World revolutions the political stalemate of the post capitalist states the rise of the New Right in the USA and the sharpened contradictions between the Western countries themselves The Making of the Second Cold War provides a careful integrated political history of international developments since the 1960s No other book on the subject has the same range or attempts to knit together all the factors that have produced the contemporary world situation
