Tailor Your CV

No two jobs are the same, and neither should be your CVs. Tailor your CV to match the job description and requirements.

Use Action Verbs

Begin bullet points with action verbs like "managed," "developed," or "implemented." This shows you're proactive and saves space.

Formatting Matters

Keep your formatting minimalist and consistent. Proof check alignment, bullet point styles, break lines, font sizes etc.

Highlight Relevant Skills

Emphasize skills vital to the role that you are applying for. Showcase specific instances of their successful application.

Proofread

Small errors can suggest a lack of attention to detail. Proofread thoroughly and have someone else review it too.

Add a Title

Start your CV with a title that aligns with the job you're targeting. This immediately tells the hiring manager that you are a relevant candidate.

Quantify Achievements

Show your impact through numbers. Rather than saying "reduced month end close time," say "reduced month end close by 2 days".

Focus on Recent Experiences

Spend more space detailing your last two roles and be more succinct with earlier ones. Recency often matters most to hiring managers.

Software Skills

Be specific with your software skills. Instead of mentioning "Advanced Excel skills", highlight your abilities to perform Financial Modeling.

Keep It Concise

In most cases, your CV should be no longer than two pages. Prioritize information that adds value to your application.
