British Power and International Relations during the 1950s Michael J. Turner, 2009-10-08 This book examines Britain's role and influence in a pivotal decade. The postwar international order was still taking shape in the 1950s. Much was unsettled and in these circumstances Britain could realistically expect to remain and be treated as one of the Big Three world powers along with the United States and Soviet Union. Some adjustments were required in British priorities and methods in view of changing pressures and needs at home and abroad but the continuing desire was to make Britain's position tenable in those parts of the world that were of special importance to British prestige, power, strategy, prosperity and security. This book elucidates the motives behind key decisions, discusses their far-reaching consequences, explains why some options were taken and others rejected and places British policy making in the appropriate international context. Designed primarily for undergraduate and beginning postgraduate students, the book offers an up-to-date, single-volume treatment of major themes in British and international history: historiographical synthesis and comment, detailed narrative, accessible, easy-to-follow analysis and a clear, evidence-based point of view concerning the survival of British power in challenging times.

British Defence Policy Since 1945 Ritchie Ovendale, 1994 Based on excerpts from original sources, this book provides an introduction to the controversies and dilemmas that have confronted those making and implementing British defence policy since the end of World War II. Ovendale explores the policy dilemmas caused by Britain's parallel commitments to continental Europe and to a global foreign policy, the legacy of her imperial past. He also examines the decision in 1957 to rely on the nuclear deterrent, abolish conscription and move away from a maritime strategy and the role of the Treasury in dictating the limits of British defence policy.
