Nominalistic Systems Rolf A. Eberle,2012-12-06 1 1 PROGRAM It will be our aim to reconstruct with precision certain views which have been traditionally associated with nominalism and to investigate problems arising from these views in the construction of interpreted formal systems Several such systems are developed in accordance with the demand that the sentences of a system which is acceptable to a nominalist must not imply the existence of any entities other than individuals Emphasis will be placed on the constructionist method of philosophical analysis To follow this method is to introduce the central notions of the subject matter to be investigated into a system governed by exact rules For example the constructionist method of investigating the properties of geometric figures may consist in formulating a system of postulates and definitions which together with the apparatus of formal logic generates all necessary truths concerning geometric figures Similarly a constructionist analysis of the notion of an individual may take the form of an axiomatic theory whose provable assertions are just those which seem essential to the role played by the concept of an individual in system atic contexts Such axiomatic theories gain in interest if they are supplemented by precise semantical rules specifying the denotation of all terms and the truth conditions of all sentences of the theory

Toward a Directionalist Theory of Space H. Scott Hestevold,2020-07-02 In Toward a Directionalist Theory of Space On Going Nowhere H Scott Hestevold formulates a new relationalist theory of space by appealing to the view that the universe is directioned in the sense that there exist directional relations a class of spatial relations that Leibniz overlooked Extending the directionalist relationalist theory of space to the problem of when it is that discrete objects compose a whole Hestevold revisits his answer to the Special Composition Question He also uses the directionalist relationalist theory to formulate reductivist theories of boundaries and holes theories that may allow one to resist the view that boundaries and holes are ontologically parasitic entities Finally he explores directionalism relationalism vis vis spacetime After noting findings of modern physics that favor substantivalist spacetime and then developing metaphysical concerns that favor instead directionalist relationalist spacetime Hestevold notes the ontological benefit of endorsing spatiotemporal directional relations even if spacetime substantivalism is the winning theory Cases Argued and Decided in the Supreme Court of the United States ,1925 Manual of United States Surveying J. Oddie,2012-12-06 The concept of likeness to truth like that of truth itself is fundamental to a realist conception of inquiry To demonstrate this we need only make two rather modest aim of an inquiry as an inquiry is realist assumptions the truth doctrine that the the truth of some matter and the progress doctrine that one false theory may realise this aim better than another Together these yield the conclusion that a false theory may be more truthlike or closer to the truth than another It is the aim of this book to give a rigorous philosophical analysis of the concept of likeness to truth and to examine the consequences some of them no doubt surprising to those who have been unduly impressed by the admittedly important true false dichotomy Truthlikeness is not only a requirement of a particular philosophical outlook it is as deeply embedded in common sense as the concept of truth Everyone seems to be capable of grading various propositions in different hypothetical situations according to their closeness to the truth in those situations And if my experience is anything to go by there is remarkable unanimity on these pretheoretical judge ments This is not proof that there is a single coherent concept underlying these judgements The whole point of engaging in philosophical analysis is to make this claim plausible
