

Court seems set to ease Idaho abortion ban

Posting indicates exception would be allowed when woman is in danger

By Abbie VanDyke

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court seems poised to temporarily allow emergency abortions in Idaho when a woman's health is at risk, according to a copy of what appeared to be the opinion that showed up briefly on the court's website Wednesday.

The unsigned opinion distinguished the case on procedural grounds, stating that the court should instead first address the merits of the dispute, according to the 22-page document, which was published by Bloomberg News. A decision would not issue a ruling by a lower federal court that had passed Idaho's case out of court on abortion and said hospitals in the state could perform emergency abortions if necessary to protect the life of the mother.

The court orders on whether a federal law requiring emergencies care for any patient overrides Idaho's strict abortion ban, which outlines the procedure with few exceptions unless the pregnant person's life is in danger.

It was unclear whether the document was final, and a spokesperson for the court said only that a decision in the joined cases, Mitrov v. Cooper, Stevens and Grabe v. United States, would eventually be released.

The court's previous decision said inadvertently and briefly provided a document to the press, but it did not name the person, Spicer, McCabe. The court's opinion is in Mitrov v. Cooper. ABORTION, Page A6

Focus on samples in death of woman

Doctor sees no sign of tests in Stoughton case

By Laura Cymak

After Sandra Birchmore, 49, was found dead in her Stoughton apartment in 2021, investigators looked for biological material from her body for a sexual assault kit, and preserved vital tissue because she was pregnant.

But more than three years later, a forensic pathologist hired by her family questioned whether the samples were ever tested, telling a lawyer for her family last June that it appears they haven't been examined.

The claims by Dr. Michael Madden add to the controversies surrounding the death of Birchmore, 33, a former participant in a Stoughton police youth program who killed her mother and two other friends before she died that after was expecting a baby for a married detective on the scene. The FBI and the attorney general's office have launched their own investigations into Birchmore's case.

At her New York District Attorney's office, Massachusetts State Police, and the Office of the Chief Medical Examiner were the first investigators to be called in to determine if all evidence to say whether the samples signed out by Madden have been tested.

Given the connections between Birchmore and the three former Stoughton police officers, TESTING, Page A7

A federal program that few know about gives low-income a boost

Jenny Marvella, shown dancing with her daughter Laiba Marvella, outside their house in Hyde Park, was able to save about $4,000 toward the down payment, thanks to the Family Self Sufficiency program.

By Emily Jimenez

Homeownership is a dream for many Americans, and Jenny Marvella was no exception. Marvella wanted a place to call her own. A home where her 11- and 14-year-old could have friends over for meals and not worry about the neighbors. Still the cold reality would plague her: "Where am I gonna get that much money?"

Marvella lived in affordable housing in Boston. She worked a full-time job and saved. But as she felt it, "The dream was always an image in my mind. It'll never make it."

In the fall of 2018, she got a flyer in the mail advertising something she thought was too good to be true — a obscure federal program that would allow her to leverage her rent to save toward a nest egg.

The 24-year-old program, called the Family Self Sufficiency program or FSS, allows participants who live in public housing to save some of the money they would typically pay toward rent to reach certain financial goals, such as buying a new car, paying off college debt, or starting a business. For Marvella, that meant saving around $4,000 that helped with a down payment on her first home, in Hyde Park.

In the affordable housing world, some experts ironically refer to FSS as one of the best-kept secrets. It's a resource that could help more people buy a home or pay off debt, and yet so few people know it exists. Indeed, Massachusetts housing authorities serve about 4,500 FSS participants last year, but more than 200,000 more people could benefit from the program. HOMEOWNERS, Page A7

FORMER SELF-SUFFICIENCY PROGRAM

Families are able to save what they would normally pay in rent increased in a separate escrow account.

Participants typically stay in public housing for 5 years and can save between $4,000-$8,000.

Massachusetts housing authorities served about 4,500 participants last year, but more than 200,000 more people could benefit from the program.

Identity theft has overwhelmed the IRS, resulting in a backlog of 500,000 unprocessed returns.

Teacher fired for helping student access abortion

Says 'misleading narrative' implied adult was a minor

By Steven Poeter

A teacher fired by a private school in New Hampshire for secretly helping a pregnant student access abortion in a lawsuit filed with the state Department of Education and the state's top education officials, alleging they spun a "misleading narrative" implying the student was a minor even though they knew she was at least 18 at the time.

In a lawsuit filed Monday in Merrimack County Superior Court, the teacher-association Council for the Free Frank Edelfelt of creating a false perception of her conduct, and she accused the Department of Education of exceeding its authority and violating her due process rights by revoking her teaching credential without a fair and impartial process.

The lawsuit refers to commentary published on Edelfelt's Department of Education's website in April, in which Edelfelt published an affidavit in which she stated she had lied in order to miss a day of work and escort a student to undergo an abortion, which she stated had been at least 48 hours before an abortion can be performed on an unaccompanied minor, according to state law.

The lawsuit said that Edelfelt's commentary seemed to suggest the teacher had helped the student access the abortion. TEACHERS, Page A10

STILL WAITING

Karen Reed left the Dedham courthouse on Wednesday after jurors were dismissed following the first full day of deliberations. They will resume on Thursday. More on the case, B1.
