Daniela Niemeyer

Bound For America:

Bound for America A. Roger Ekirch, 1987 During the 18th century transportation to the colonies became Britain's foremost criminal punishment This study combines analysis with narrative to provide insights into the origins of crime and the treatment of offenders during this period in both the UK and the USA

Bound for America Elizabeth Lutzeier, 2002 In this stand alone sequel to The Coldest Winter Eamonn and his family are leaving famine stricken Ireland They are bound for America where land is plentiful and there are jobs for anyone who is prepared to work hard They set sail full of hope But will the reality live up to Eamonn's dreams or are there more hardships and heartbreak in store for them An intensely moving story this is historical fiction of the highest calibre Though written from the child's point of view the book never flinches from the reality of the character's situation and is written with raw and frequently poignant honesty Tackles issues of race and the plight of refugees that are as relevant today as they were 150 years ago

Bound with an Iron Chain Anthony Vaver, 2011 Most people know that England shipped thousands of convicts to Australia but few are aware that colonial America was the original destination for Britain's unwanted criminals In the 18th century thousands of British convicts were separated from their families chained together in the hold of a ship and carried off to America sometimes for the theft of a mere handkerchief What happened to these convicts once they arrived in America Did they prosper in an environment of unlimited opportunity or were they ostracized by the other colonists Anthony Vaver tells the stories of the petty thieves and professional criminals who were punished by being sent across the ocean to work on plantations In bringing to life this forgotten chapter in American history he challenges the way we think about immigration to early America The book also includes a helpful appendix with tips on researching individual convicts transported to America
