Building The Nation:

Building the Nation Heather Selma Gregg, 2018-12-01 Building the Nation draws from foreign policy reports and interviews with U S military officers to investigate recent U S led efforts to nation build in Iraq and Afghanistan Heather Selma Gregg argues that efforts to nation build in both countries focused more on what should be called state building or how to establish a government rule of law security forces and a viable economy Considerably less attention was paid to what might truly be called nation building the process of developing a sense of shared identity purpose and destiny among a population within a state s borders and popular support for the state and its government According to Gregg efforts to stabilize states in the modern world require two key factors largely overlooked in Iraq and Afghanistan popular involvement in the process of rebuilding the state that gives the population ownership of the process and its results and efforts to foster and strengthen national unity Gregg offers a hypothetical look at how the United States and its allies could have used a population centric approach to build viable states in Iraq and Afghanistan focusing on initiatives that would have given the population buy in and agency Moving forward Gregg proposes a six step program for state and nation building in the twenty first century stressing that these efforts are as much about how state building is done as they are about specific goals or programs

The Challenge of Nation-Building Rebecca Patterson, 2014-09-17 In the last decades the United States Army has often been involved in missions other than conventional warfare These include low intensity conflicts counterinsurgency operations and nation building efforts Although non conventional warfare represents the majority of missions executed in the past sixty years the Army still primarily plans organizes and trains to fight conventional ground wars Consequently in the last ten years there has been considerable criticism regarding the military's inability to accomplish tasks other than conventional war Failed states and the threat they represent cannot be ignored or solved with conventional military might In order to adapt to this new reality the U S Army must innovate This text examines the conditions that have allowed or prevented the U S Army to innovate for nation building effectively By doing so it shows how military leadership and civil military relations have changed Nation building refers to a type of military occupation where the goal is regime change or survival a large number of ground troops are deployed and both military and civilian personnel are used in the political administration of an occupied country with the goals of establishing a productive economy and a stable government Such tasks have always been a challenge for the U S military which is not normally equipped or trained to undertake them Using military effectiveness as the measurement of innovative success the book analyzes several U S nation building cases including post World War II Germany South Korea from 1945 1950 the Vietnam War and Operation Iraqi Freedom By doing so it reveals the conditions that enabled military innovation in one unique case Germany while explaining what prevented it in the others This variation of effectiveness leads to examine prevailing military innovation theories threat based accounts quality of military organizations and civil military relations This text comes at a critical time as the U S military faces dwindling resources and tough choices about its force structure and mission orientation It will add to the growing debate about the role of civilians military reformers and institutional factors in military innovation and effectiveness
