Automatic Physical Design for XML Databases Iman Elghandour,2010 Database systems employ physical structures such as indexes and materialized views to improve query performance potentially by orders of magnitude It is therefore important for a database administrator to choose the appropriate configuration of these physical structures i e the appropriate physical design for a given database Deciding on the physical design of a database is not an easy task and a considerable amount of research exists on automatic physical design tools for relational databases Recently XML database systems are increasingly being used for managing highly structured XML data and support for XML data is being added to commercial relational database systems This raises the important question of how to choose the appropriate physical design i e the appropriate set of physical structures for an XML database Relational automatic physical design tools are not adequate so new research is needed in this area In this thesis we address the problem of automatic physical design for XML databases which is the process of automatically selecting the best set of physical structures for a given database and a given query workload representing the client application s usage patterns of this data We focus on recommending two types of physical structures XML indexes and relational materialized views of XML data Enterprise Architecture, Integration and Interoperability Peter Bernus,Guy Doumeingts,Mark Fox,2010-08-23 Enterprise Architecture Integration and Interoperability and the Networked enterprise have become the theme of many conferences in the past few years These conferences were organised by IFIP TC5 with the support of its two working groups WG 5 12 Architectures for Enterprise Integration and WG 5 8 Enterprise Interoperability both concerned with aspects of the topic how is it possible to architect and implement businesses that are flexible and able to change to interact and use one another's services in a dynamic manner for the purpose of joint value creation. The original question of enterprise integration in the 1980s was how can we achieve and integrate information and material flow in the enterprise. Various methods and reference models were developed or proposed ranging from tightly integrated monolithic system architectures through cell based manufacturing to on demand interconnection of businesses to form virtual enterprises in response to market opportunities. Two camps have emerged in the endeavour to achieve the same goal namely to achieve interoperability between businesses whereupon interoperability is the ability to exchange information in order to use one another's services or to jointly implement a service. One school of researchers addresses the technical aspects of creating dynamic and static interconnections between disparate businesses or parts thereof.

Mobile and Wireless Design Essentials Martyn Mallick, 2003-03-10 Describes mobile and wireless design techniques from the developer's perspective offering in depth analysis of the complete range of network technologies. The author is an experienced trainer who leads seminars and workshops worldwide for iAnywhere Solutions a subsidiary of Sybase.

Global Design to Gain a Competitive Edge Xiu-Tian Yan, Benoit Eynard, William J. Ion, 2008-07-30 Recent rapid globalisation of manufacturing industries leads to a drive and thirst for rapid advancements in technological development and expertise in the fields of advanced design and manufacturing especially at their interfaces. This development results in many economical benefits to and improvement of quality of life for many people all over the world. Technically speaking this rapid development also create many opportunities and challenges for both industrialists and academics as the design requirements and constraints have completely changed in this global design and manufacture environment. Consequently the way to design manufacture and realise products have changed as well. The days of designing for a local market and using local suppliers in manufacturing have gone if enterprises aim to maintain their competitiveness and global expansion leading to further success. In this global context and scenario both industry and the academia have an urgent need to equip themselves with the latest knowledge technology and methods developed for engineering design and manufacture. To address this shift in engineering design and manufacture supported by the European Commission under the Asia Link Programme with a project title FASTAHEAD A Framework Approach to Strengthening Asian Higher Education in Advanced Design and Manufacture three key project partners namely the University of Strathclyde of the United Kingdom Northwestern Polytechnical University of China and the Troyes University of Technology of France organised a third international conference.
