Competition And Succession In Pastures:

Competition and Succession in Pastures P. G. Tow, Alec Lazenby, 2000-12-01 This book describes how competition between plant species and succession in plant ecosystems operate in grasslands and grazed pastures both natural and sown It discusses how competition both affects botanical structure productivity and persistence of pastures and is itself regulated by biological environmental and management factors such as grazing animals The book also examines the ways in which competition and succession are analysed evaluated and measured and brings to the agricultural arena the considerable progress made in understanding the principles of competition from theoretical and experimental ecology Journal of the American Society of Agronomy American Society of Agronomy, 1929 An international journal of agriculture and natural resource sciences Publications Colorado Agricultural Experiment Station, 1930 Publications of ... Colorado Agricultural Experiment Station, 1930 Advances in Agronomy ,1963-01-01 Advances in Agronomy Annual Report - Colorado Agricultural Experiment Station, Colorado State University Colorado Agricultural Experiment Station, 1920 Bulletin - Colorado Agricultural Experiment Station Colorado Agricultural Experiment Station, 1930 Tropical Grasslands ,2001 Plant Competition in a Changing World Judy Simon, Susanne Schmidt, 2017-06-22 Competitiveness describes a key ability important for plants to grow and survive abiotic and biotic stresses Under optimal but particularly under non optimal conditions plants compete for resources including nutrients light water space pollinators and other Competition occurs above and belowground In resource poor habitats competition is generally considered to be more pronounced than in resource rich habitats Although competition occurs between different players within an ecosystem such as between plants and soil microorganisms our topic focusses on plant plant interactions and includes inter specific competition between different species of similar and different life forms and intra specific competition Strategies for securing resources via spatial or temporal separation and different resource needs generally reduce competition Increasingly important is the effect of invasive plants and subsequent decline in biodiversity and ecosystem function Current knowledge and future climate predictions suggest that in some situations competition will be intensified with occurrence of increased abiotic e g water and nutrient limitations and biotic stresses e g mass outbreak of insects but competition might also decrease in situations where plant productivity and survival declines e g habitats with degraded soils Changing interactions climate change and biological invasions place new challenges on ecosystems Understanding processes and mechanisms that underlie the interactions between plants and environmental factors will aid predictions and intervention There is much need to develop strategies to secure ecosystem services via primary productivity and to prevent the continued loss of biodiversity This Research Topic provides an up to date account of knowledge on plant plant interactions with a focus on identifying the mechanisms underpinning competitive ability The Research Topic aims to showcase knowledge that links ecological relevance with physiological processes to better understanding plant and ecosystem function Bulletin Colorado

Ecosystems of Disturbed Ground L.R. Walker, 1999-12-17 As the human population inexorably grows its cumulative impact on the Earth's resources is hard to ignore. The ability of the Earth to support more humans is dependent on the ability of humans to manage natural resources wisely. Because disturbance alters resource levels, effective management requires understanding of the ecology of disturbance. This book is the first to take a global approach to the description of both natural and anthropogenic disturbance regimes that physically impact the ground. Natural disturbances such as erosion, volcanoes, wind, herbivory, flooding, and drought, plus anthropogenic disturbances such as forestry, grazing, mining, urbanization, and military actions are considered. Both disturbance impacts and the biotic recovery are addressed, as well as the interactions of different types of disturbance. Other chapters cover processes that are important to the understanding of disturbance of all types, including soil processes, nutrient cycles, primary productivity, succession, animal behaviour, and competition. Humans react to disturbances by avoiding, exacerbating, or restoring them, or by passing environmental legislation. All of these issues are covered in this book. Managers need better predictive models and robust data collections that help determine both site-specific and generalized responses to disturbance. Multiple disturbances have a complex effect on both physical and biotic processes as they interact. This book provides a wealth of detail about the process of disturbance and recovery, as well as a synthesis of the current state of knowledge about disturbance theory with extensive documentation.      Australian Journal of Agricultural Research, 2005      The Rangeland Journal, 2005      Australian Journal of Experimental Agriculture, 2008

Ecotones Between Forest and Grassland Randall W. Myser, 2012-07-10 Ecotones are dynamic overlapping boundary areas where major terrestrial biomes meet. As past studies have shown, and as the chapters in this book will illustrate, their structure, size, and scope have changed considerably over the millennia, expanding and shrinking as climate and/or other driving conditions also changed. Today, however, many of them are changing at a rate not seen for a long time, perhaps largely due to climate change and other human-induced factors. Indeed, ecotones are more sensitive to climate change than the biomes on either side and thus may serve as critical early indicators of future climate change. As ecotones change, they also redefine the limits of the biomes on either side by altering their distributions of species, because in addition to their own endemic species, any ecotone will also have species from both adjoining biomes. Consequently, they may also be places of high levels of species interaction, serving as active evolutionary laboratories which generate new species that then migrate back into adjacent biomes. Ecotones Between Forest and Grassland explores how these ecotones have changed in the past, how they are changing today, and how they are likely to change in the future. The book includes chapters from around the world, with a special focus on South American and Neotropical ecotones.      New Zealand Journal of Ecology, 2003      Pastures and Pasture Research Colin Malcolm Donald, 1946      Plant Competition Frederic Edward Clements, John Ernest Weaver, Herbert Christian Hanson, 1929
