Citizens' participation in the formulation of government public policies is an important way for citizens to participate in decision-making. The article examines citizen participation in the process of public policy making in China, pointing out the new trend of citizen participation and identifying some problems of citizen participation, such as insufficient motivation of citizen participation and the prevalence of extra-institutional participation. The reasons for these problems are analyzed in depth and countermeasures are proposed, such as improving the relevant legal system and increasing the supervision and feedback of the policy-making process.

Key Words: public policy making; citizen participation; open government; Public Agenda

Compared with western countries, China's civil society is still in its infancy and transition period, which is not mature enough, and the sense of citizenship needs to be further strengthened. Therefore, we should take strengthening civic education, cultivating civic awareness and civic spirit as the primary task.

1. Cultivate civil society and improve citizens' subjective consciousness and participation ability

First of all, we should strengthen civic education and cultivate their civic awareness. Citizens should realize that they are an integral part of the society and an indispensable part of the society. They should establish the concept of equality, humanistic awareness and legal awareness, and infuse and convey the concept of freedom and equality to citizens. We should also strengthen citizens' awareness of participation and social responsibility education, so that citizens can actively participate in the management of social affairs, actively participate in the formulation of government public policies, contribute their wisdom, and enhance citizens' awareness of participation.

Secondly, improve citizens' political participation ability. Improving citizens' ability and quality to participate in decision-making is the key to improving citizens' participation in decision-making. First, we should carry out democratic political education to enhance citizens' political and cultural quality, so that everyone can correctly use their own knowledge and information to make decisions. Second, we should continue to teach citizens about politics, cultivate their political participation skills, and let them know how to protect their legitimate rights in participation, so as to continuously enhance their policy participation ability and level.

2. Improve the relevant legal system for citizens to participate in policy formulation, and ensure the channels for public opinion expression

Information related to public policy formulation should be actively disclosed by the government, including policy formulation objectives, influencing factors, etc. Information related to citizen participation should be made known to citizens in advance, including citizen selection criteria, materials to be prepared before
