

CIVIL SERVICE REFORM.

A practical business man chooses his employees for their fitness, and while they work well he keeps them.

Our national government, under both parties, often follows a different rule: to make appointments as a reward for political services, and to turn out trained employees to make room for new ones.

This is a violation of elementary business principles.

President Grant, in his message of December, 1870, said:

"There is no duty which so much embarrasses the Executive and heads of departments as that of appointment, nor is there any such thankless labor imposed on Senators or Representatives as that of finding places for constituents. The present system does not secure the best men, and often not even fit men, for the public places. The elevation and purification of the civil service of the government will be hailed with approval by the whole people of the United States."

In Congress, Gen. Garfield said:

"We press such appointments upon the departments; we crowd the doors; we fill the corridors; Senators and Representatives bring the offices and bureaus until the public business is obstructed; the positions of officers are worn out, and sometimes for fear of losing their places by our influence, they do not give way, and appoint men, not because they are fit for their positions, but because we ask it. There, Mr. Chairman, is, in my judgment, the true field for retrenchment and reform. I believe that we can, at almost half the present cost, manage all these departments better than they are now managed, if we adopt a judicious system of civil service."

CIVIL SERVICE REFORM means a return by law to the orderly business system which was followed by Washington and all the early Presidents. Such a reform has been accomplished in England, and has proved a great success, and it can be effected here.

The CIVIL SERVICE REFORM ASSOCIATION, lately organized in Boston, invites members from the whole State.

Correspondence is requested, and upon application by mail a copy of the Constitution and the publications of the Association will be sent free. Address, P. O. Box 1158, Boston.

EXTRACT FROM THE CONSTITUTION.

"The members, while recognizing that certain offices should be in sympathy with the policy of the administration, believe that the routine business of government should be conducted on business principles; that officers should be appointed on account of their fitness for the work to be done, and should be continued in office as long as they do that work well; that their offices should not be used for partisan purposes; that representatives are chosen to legislate, and should not be required to give their time and thought to the distribution of offices; that the adoption of a well-devised system carrying out these principles will insure better administration and better legislation.

"The association will hold meetings, raise funds, publish, and circulate appropriate information, correspond and cooperate with similar associations organized elsewhere, and endeavor to secure such executive and legislative action as will promote the objects for which it is formed.

"Members of any political party may become members of this association, and in the debates or publications of the association no question shall be discussed upon party grounds."
