Civilized Demons:

The Civilized Demons: The Harappans in Rigveda Malati J. Shendge, 2003-06 Myth and mysticism have reigned supreme in Rgvedic interpretation for more than two millennia and a half Even now it cannot be said to be free of these This study aims at completing the process of rational inquiry in Rgveda begun two centuries ago It leaves behind myths and mystic experiences simultaneously drawing the line between fact and fancy which has eluded the scholars Two types of evidence literary and archaeological have been used Literary evidence ranges from Rgveda to the Brahmanas The Archaeological material covers pre Harappan Harappan and post Harappan levels Through the interdisciplinary approach consisting of linguistic anthropological and symbolical analysis of the material the study emphasizes a consistently rational attitude to the study of Rgveda In fact as the study amply demonstrates the fresh air of reason may change our understanding of Rgveda and also of ancient Indian history Rgvedic hymns from this viewpoint may probably prove to be a valuable source of information of the historical events which led to the downfall of the pre Aryan Indus civilization This is correlated to the archaeological material available on the Harappan sites This is the first investigation of its kind and the conclusions of the study are no less original Besides establishing the rationality of the Rgvedic narratives it shows the events and their agents to be historical in the light of available archaeological material The theory and the approach hold out a promise and may transform our understanding of these ancient compositions from myth to history

Over the last 40 years our vision of Chinese culture and history has been transformed by the discovery of the role of religion in Chinese state making and in local society The Daoist religion in particular long despised as superstitious has recovered its place as the native higher religion But while the Chinese state tried from the fifth century on to construct an orthodoxy based on Confucianism Daoism and Buddhism local society everywhere carved out for itself its own geomantically defined space and organized itself around local festivals in honor of gods of its own choosing gods who were often invented and then represented by illiterate mediums Looking at China from the point of view of elite or popular culture therefore produces very different results John Lagerwey has done extensive fieldwork on local society and its festivals This book represents a first attempt to use this new research to integrate top down and bottom up views of Chinese society culture and history It should be of interest to a wide range of China specialists students of religion and popular culture as well as participants in the ongoing interdisciplinary dialogue between historians and anthropologists John Lagerwey is professor of Daoist history at the cole Pratique des Hautes tudes and of Chinese studies at the Chinese University of Hong Kong He is author of Taoist Ritual in Chinese Society and History and editor of the 30 volume Traditional Hakka Society Series as well as the recently published four volume set Early Chinese Religion
