

Affective Teaching Strategies

Affective Teachers

- Effective teachers are prepared; they plan the classroom environment, set up the materials, are ready to teach before class starts, and continually analyze how to make their teaching more productive. (Sterling, 2009)
- The teaching process should take into account individual differences in cognitive, emotional and motivational student functioning, on the one hand, and learning should actively engage the learner and be relevant to personal interests, experiences and needs, on the other. (Shechtman & Leichtentritt, 2009)
- Teachers must establish routines to facilitate classroom procedures, which is key to successful teaching and learning. (Sterling, 2009)
