Abstract. This article is devoted to the topic “Modern regulatory and legal regulation of the peasant (farmer) economy: problems of theory and practice”. The article examines the legal instruments of peasant farming existing in the Russian Federation (including in the context of Russia and the Eurasian region). The issues of regulating the structure and support of the peasant (farmer) economy are relevant, since regulation is associated with the development of new technologies, increasing the level of mechanization, professional and legal culture of rural residents. The possibilities of the functioning of laws give reason to talk about the need to clarify legal instruments, including regional instruments. The modern problems of the economic-legal regulation of the activity of the peasant (farmer) economy, both from the theoretical and practical points of view, are discussed.

1 Introduction

The Constitution of the Russian Federation and the Civil Code of the Russian Federation regulate the ownership, use and disposal of land and other natural resources, as well as issues of peasant (farmer) farming. In particular, citizens who conduct joint activities in the field of agriculture without forming a legal entity on the basis of an agreement on the establishment of a peasant (farmer) farm have the right to create a legal entity – a peasant (farmer) farm. The Federal Law “On Peasant (Farmer) Farming” defines the legal, economic and social conditions for the establishment and operation of peasant (farmer) farms. The law guarantees the right of citizens to establish peasant (farmer) farms and their independent activities.

Federal scientific and technical programs for the Development of Agriculture for 2017–2025 is designed to ensure a stable growth in the production of agricultural products obtained through the use of seeds of pure domestic variation and breeding products, materials, technologies for the production of high-quality food, food additives for animal and aquaculture, for veterinary use, particularly and agricultural products of biological origin, processing and storage of products, raw materials and food, modern diagnostic tools, quality control methods and operation of genetic material. Among other things it is planned to attract investments in the agricultural complex, to create and implement technologies for the production of seeds of
