Hundreds of years ago, life in Europe was dangerous and war was common. For powerful people, built castles — strong towers where they could take shelter from their enemies, or launch attacks against them. Usually a noblemen, or lord, owned the castle. The king gave the lord land in return for soldiers to help fight wars.

Each castle was built on a hill or a rocky outcrop, and had a moat around it.

When the king gave the lord land in return for their help, they agreed enough to live on and were protected in return by the lord and his soldiers. Today, many of the castles still stand around the world. The lord and his officials managed the castle and the lands around it. Below the officials in each were priests, important servants, and soldiers. In the bottom of each society were the most humble workers, such as farmers and the important chamberlain below.
