Alternative Perspectives In Assessing Childrens Language And Literacy:

Alternative Perspectives in Assessing Children's Language and Literacy Kathleen Holland,David Bloome,Judith Solsken,1994 One of the realities of educational practice in the late 20th century is the increasing role of assessment especially of children s oral and written language While there are many issues and problems surrounding this assessment one problem that needs to be addressed is the lack of alternative ways of assessing children s language and literacy for K 12 practitioners There are many ways to approach the assessment of language and literacy How one approaches the assessment of oral and written language depends in large part on how language is defined and on what purposes language is viewed as serving In this book alternative ways of assessing language are based on three different perspectives defining language and its uses anthropological socio psycholinguistic and literary Although applying these perspectives to language is not new only recently have educators and others taken seriously the need for assessment of language to be consistent with the perspectives of language underlying classroom instruction Simply put as language education including reading writing and oral language becomes increasingly based upon anthropological socio psycholinguistic and literary principles the assessment of language and literacy must also be based upon such principles This book discusses and illustrates how to reconceptualize assessment in terms of the alternative perspectives outlined here

In a bilingual language setting teaching in a second language is called immersion education This review of case studies from around the world demonstrates its implementation in a variety of settings that range from preprimary to tertiary Literacy, Gender, and Work Judith W. Solsken, 1993 This is the first in depth study of gender issues in early literacy learning It provides vivid portraits of the difficulties that both boys and girls experience in learning to read and write at home and in classrooms due to gendered divisions of labor in families and schools The portraits are based on data from a three year ethnographic study in which learning biographies were constructed for thirteen children from their entry into kindergarten until the completion of second grade The biographies show that in learning to read and write children construct gendered identities and negotiate their social relations with parents siblings teachers and peers Even in supportive families and progressive classrooms children face difficulties in literacy learning as a result of family and classroom practices organizing literacy on the dimensions of male female and work play The result is often the unwitting perpetuation of traditional gender roles in families schools and the larger society This account of early literacy learning links the personal and social meaning of literacy in children s everyday lives with the larger cultural and political significance of gender The theoretical arguments and questions raised in the book challenge prevailing psychological and sociocultural models of literacy learning and set the agenda for future research on literacy and gender
