Sitting Hours and the Parliamentary Calendar Great Britain. Parliament. House of Commons. Select Committee on Procedure, Great Britain: Parliament: House of Commons: Procedure Committee, 2012 There has been a huge increase in the constituency workload over the past few years adding to the pressure on Members of Parliament Each Member has a different way of working which means in considering sitting hours there are no mainstream options which are necessarily right or wrong The evidence suggests that the current balance of about 150 days over 34 weeks per year is broadly correct and should remain approximately as is The Committee recommends that the House should be given the opportunity to vote on whether the House should continue to sit in September from 2013 onwards There is widespread recognition that there is no scope for any diminution in the time available to the House for debate and scrutiny of legislation The current pattern of 8 sitting hours on each sitting day between Monday and Thursday should therefore also continue subject to future decisions concerning Friday sittings Suggestions were heard that the House should sit normal working hours but that could be ill suited to the transaction of other important Parliamentary business and needs of Members whose constituencies are some distance from Westminster The House should be enabled to come to a decision in respect of each different day The Committee is also currently considering whether consideration of private Members bills should be moved from Fridays and programming of legislation The proposal of injury time to compensate for time spent on oral statements was deemed undesirable but the Committee suggests that there should be a mechanism for backbenchers to question a Minister between 11 00 and 11 30 on Wednesdays
