The author's thirty-year career has laid the groundwork for this uniquely scientific study of the ballistics of civilian firearms. Written for the law enforcement officer, the college instructor, the investigator, coroner, district attorney, competition shooter, and avid hunter, this book explains clearly and unambiguously the physics and chemistry involved when bullet and target meet. Types of wounds caused by various firearms, suggestions of firearms and cartridge to be used for special purposes, and performance information for the reader wishing to purchase a handgun are also included. The author's thorough knowledge of ballistics is clearly demonstrated in his professional and informative book.
