Dealing with stormwater runoff in urban areas is a problem that is getting bigger and more expensive. As we cover porous surfaces with impervious structures—commercial buildings, parking lots, roads, and houses—finding places for rainwater and snowmelt to soak in becomes harder. Many landscapers, architects, planners, and others have proposed that the use of green, localized management practices such as rain gardens and bio swales may function as well as traditional gray pipes and basins at reducing the effects of stormwater runoff and do so in a way that is more attractive in the landscape and possibly also less expensive. To make stormwater management practices work, however, communities need to know the real costs and policy makers need to give people incentives to adopt the best practices. Economic Incentives for Stormwater Control addresses the true costs and benefits of stormwater management practices, SMPs, and examines the incentives that can be used to encourage their adoption. Highlighting the economic aspects, this practical book offers case studies of the application of various stormwater runoff control policies. It also presents the theory behind the different mechanisms used and illustrates successes and potential obstacles to implementation. The book covers: Efficient use of green SMPs; Low impact development; LID style new construction; Green infrastructure; Property prices and incentive mechanisms to encourage homeowners to retain stormwater on their property; Legal, economic, and hydrological issues associated with various incentive mechanisms; In lieu fees and cap and trade incentives. Primarily concerned with the sociodemographic and economic aspects of people's participation in stormwater runoff control, this accessible volume explores opportunities available to municipalities, stormwater managers, and stakeholder groups to enact sustainable, effective stormwater management practices.

Notwithstanding past achievements, flood damage continues to rise throughout the world as the magnitudes of floods increase, partly as a result of poor land management and partly by climate change, growing populations, and continuing development in flood-prone areas and the aging and deterioration of flood defences. One of the major goals of water management is the protection of society from floods. That issue is addressed here in terms of such broad issues as flood analysis, flood impact, non-structural and structural flood management measures. Non-structural measures focus on flood plain management, flood insurance, flood forecasting, and warning, and emergency measures during floods. Structural measures focus on catchment management, embankments, and flood reservoirs Post flood measures are also discussed Future planning of flood management should be based on a clear understanding of the effectiveness interventions and their impacts on river catchment ecosystems Reauthorization of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act United States.
