The history of communication

In the past, people used to send a lot of letters because it was the best way to communicate. But before we had any post offices, they didn't get to work quickly, they were slow. So people used to send letters by messenger.

The first messenger was a man called Pheidon. He started to work in around 500 BC. The first messenger was made of animal skins. The messenger was made of animal skins. People used to send letters on the messenger. People used to send letters on the messenger. People used to send letters on the messenger.

In 1850, American Ray Thomson invented email. After that, people used a computer and the internet to send letters. People used to send letters on the messenger. People used to send letters on the messenger. People used to send letters on the messenger.
