Communication-centered Approach to Leadership Marilyn Macik-Frey, 2007

Communication is frequently cited as a critical component of leadership This study takes a significant theoretical departure from that view and embraces the realm of communication as a lens through which we understand leadership It proposes that leadership is inherently communicative Communication is viewed as more than a technique or component of leadership but rather the essence of leadership Barge 1994 Hackman Vickrey 1995 Communication is almost universally included in the study of leadership Capowski 1994 McLean Vickrey 1995 but is not typically viewed as a foundational element or as the central process from which leadership is a component and that is the primary contribution of this paper The objective of this dissertation is to empirically test this theoretical model The study looks at relationships supported by the leadership research related to transformational leadership emotional intelligence and follower outcomes It then incorporates interpersonal communication competence into existing models to establish its relative importance in the leadership process The critical premise is that leadership and emotion are considered unique aspects of communication In particular this study proposes that interpersonal communication competence is essential in the realization of effective leadership and in particular the transformational form of leadership with the interpretation management and expression of emotion as fundamental components Specifically communication was hypothesized to mediate the highly supported emotional intelligence transformational leadership relationship found in the literature and account for significant variance in follower performance and attitudes Results did not support the hypothesized mediation Surprisingly the negative finding was a result of the lack of support for the highly supported relationship between transformational leadership and emotional intelligence Ashkanasy Bass 2002 Barbuto Barling et al 2000 Gardner Sivanathan Fekken 2002 Without an established primary emotional intelligence and transformational leadership relationship the mediation test was not warranted Also interesting is that emotional intelligence did not show a significant relationship to interpersonal communication competence However interpersonal communication competence showed a strong positive relationship with transformational leadership and follower attitudes providing support for the importance of this construct Applied Organizational Communication Thomas E. Harris (Ph. D.), Mark D. Nelson, 2008 Building on the successful foundation of the first volume this second edition has been thoroughly revised reflecting the current state of organizational communication theory and research Highlights of this edition include extensive topical coverage integrated discussion of change diversity and digital age issues in all chapters updated analysis of major issues and influences in organizational communication and real world examples Understanding Human Communication Ronald Brian Adler, 2000 Now in its ninth edition this classic book retains the features that have made it the best selling introductory human communication text in the field an engaging and reader friendly style an inviting visual design that includes high interest marginalia on virtually every page up to date information on technology gender and cultural diversity and everyday applications based on solid research and theory Maintaining the quality of presentation and student focused pedagogy that have characterized previous editions Understanding Human Communication Ninth Edition incorporates updated examples and coverage of current communication theory It continues to equip students with effective communication skills that will make a difference in their everyday lives Book jacket An Introduction to Interpersonal Communication James C.
