Communicating Uncertainty Sharon M. Friedman, Sharon Dunwoody, Carol L. Rogers, 2012-10-12 Exploring the interactions that swirl around scientific uncertainty and its coverage by the mass media this volume breaks new ground by looking at these issues from three different perspectives that of communication scholars who have studied uncertainty in a number of ways that of science journalists who have covered these issues and that of scientists who have been actively involved in researching uncertain science and talking to reporters about it In particular Communicating Uncertainty examines how well the mass media convey to the public the complexities ambiguities and controversies that are part of scientific uncertainty In addition to its new approach to scientific uncertainty and mass media interactions this book distinguishes itself in the quality of work it assembles by some of the best known science communication scholars in the world This volume continues the exploration of interactions between scientists and journalists that the three coeditors first documented in their highly successful volume Scientists and Journalists Reporting Science as News which was used for many years as a text in science journalism courses around the world

No, They Can't John Stossel, 2012-04-10 The government is not a neutral arbiter of truth It never has been It never will be Doubt everything John Stossel does A self described skeptic he has dismantled society's sacred cows with unerring common sense Now he debunks the most sacred of them all our intuition and belief that government can solve our problems In No They Can't the New York Times bestselling author and Fox News commentator insists that we discard that idea of the perfect government left or right and retrain our brain to look only at the facts to rethink our lives as independent individuals and fast With characteristic tenacity John Stossel outlines and exposes the fallacies and facts of the most pressing issues of today's social and political climate and shows how our intuitions about them are frankly wrong the unreliable marriage between big business the media and unions the myth of tax breaks and the ignorance of their advocates why central planners never create more jobs and how government never really will why free trade works without government Interference federal regulations and the trouble they create for consumers the harm caused to the disabled by government protection of the disabled the problems social and economic generated by minimum wage laws the destructive daydreams of health insurance for everyone bad food vs good food and the government's intrusive unwelcome nanny sensibilities the dumbing down of public education and teachers unions how gun control actually increases crime and more myth busting realities of why the American people must wrest our lives back from a government stranglehold Stossel also reveals how his unyielding desire to educate the public with the truth caused an irreparable rift with ABC nobody wanted to hear the point by point facts of ObamaCare and why he left his long running stint for a new uncensored forum with Fox He lays out his ideas for education innovation as well and finally makes it perfectly clear why government action is the least effective and desirable fantasy to hang on to As Stossel says It's not about electing the right people It's about narrowing responsibilities No They Can't is an irrefutable first step toward that goal
