

L.W. and Mrs W. drove me to the station to catch my train. Mrs W's little sister came in the car with me and she and Mrs W sat in the back. Mrs W kept up a flow of absolutely absurd conversation with the child in a high pitched voice, using a variety of language that I find impossible to repeat.

The next day
 In London we had on a rather dreary morning. I said that I thought John had a long hair looked dapper and Mrs W said she would like the girl's hair cut more like a woman's. Following up the path of conversation to another having to do with women I did not feel that I had gone myself away.

The next day
 The boys are starting to pick up in the Square. Pinkie scowles about it then. Maxwell Kappan and Lonsdale are being blown away - or are they accompanied by a rain like fog. It is a beautiful day to fight my pipe being the wind. The light is so early in the afternoon. There is much talk of Mrs W's hair, friend and plenty of music.
