Building Models For Conservation And Wildlife Management:

Building Models for Conservation and Wildlife Management A. M. Starfield, Andrew L. Bleloch, 1991 In which we provide a context A simple single species model An exploratory stochastic model A complex single species model A system model Variations on a theme analytical models Cropping strategies and linear programming A rule enhanced model with age structure Decision trees tables and expert systems Ecological Modeling for Resource Management Virginia H.

Dale, 2006-04-18 This book will serve as a readable introduction to ecological modeling for people involved in resource management and will also review models for specific applications of interest to more experienced modelers Successful uses of ecological models as well as discussions of important issues in modeling are addressed The authors of this volume hope to close the gap between the state of the art in ecological modeling and the state of the practice in the use of models in management decision making General Technical Report RM., 1989 The Philosophy and Practice of Wildlife

Management Frederick F. Gilbert, Donald G. Dodds, 1992 Wildlife managers are required to have a basic knowledge of wildlife species and their biological needs along with a skill in people management This book provides a guide to wildlife management concentrating on the historical bases for and modern influences on wildlife policy and management

Environmental Modelling John Wainwright, Mark Mulligan, 2005-04-08 Simulation models are increasingly used to investigate processes and solve practical problems in a wide variety of disciplines eg climatology ecology hydrology geomorphology engineering Environmental Modelling A Practical Approach addresses the development testing and application of such models which apply across traditional boundaries and demonstrate how interactions across these boundaries can be beneficial Provides a general overview of methods and approaches as well as focusing on key subject areas written by leading practitioners in the field Assesses the advantages and disadvantages of different models used and provides case studies supported with data output tutorial exercises and links to the model and or model applications via the book s website Covers major developments in the field eg the use of GIS and remote sensing techniques and scaling issues As associated website contains colour images as well as links to www resources Wildlife-habitat Relationships in Oregon and Washington David H. Johnson, Thomas A. O'Neil, 2001 This volume provides information about the terrestrial freshwater and marine habitats of Oregon and Washington and the wildlife that depend upon them it also supports broader and more consistent conservation planning management and research The 27 chapters identify 593 wildlife species define some 300 wildlife terms profile wildlife communities review introduced and extirpated species and species at risk and discuss management approaches The volume includes color and bandw photographs maps diagrams and illustrations and the accompanying CD ROM contains additional wildlife data 60 000 records maps and seven matrixes that link wildlife species with their respective habitat types Johnson is a wildlife biologist engineer and habitat scientist and O Neill is director of the Northwest Habitat Institute they worked together on this publication project as its managing directors Annotation

Morrison, 2002-02 Predictions about where different species are where they are not and how they move across a landscape or respond to human activities if timber is harvested for instance or stream flow altered are important aspects of the work of wildlife biologists land managers and the agencies and policymakers that govern natural resources Despite the increased use and importance of model predictions these predictions are seldom tested and have unknown levels of accuracy Predicting Species Occurrences addresses those concerns highlighting for managers and researchers the strengths and weaknesses of current approaches as well as the magnitude of the research required to improve or test predictions of currently used models The book is an outgrowth of an international symposium held in October 1999 that brought together scientists and researchers at the forefront of efforts to process information about species at different spatial and temporal scales It is a comprehensive reference that offers an exhaustive treatment of the subject with 65 chapters by leading experts from around the world that review the history of the theory and practice of modeling and present a standard terminology examine temporal and spatial scales in terms of their influence on patterns and processes of species distribution offer detailed discussions of state of the art modeling tools and descriptions of methods for assessing model accuracy discuss how to predict species presence and abundance present examples of how spatially explicit data on demographics can provide important information for managers An introductory chapter by Michael A. Huston examines the ecological context in which predictions of species occurrences are made and a concluding chapter by John A. Wiens offers an insightful review and synthesis of the topics examined along with guidance for future directions and cautions regarding misuse of models Other contributors include Michael P. Austin, Barry R. Noon, Alan H. Fielding, Michael Goodchild, Brian A. Maurer, John T. Rotenberry, Paul Angermeier, Pierre R. Vernier and more than a hundred others Predicting Species Occurrences offers important new information about many of the topics raised in the seminal volume Wildlife 2000 University of Wisconsin Press 1986 and will be the standard reference on this subject for years to come Its state of the art assessment will play a key role in guiding the continued development and application of tools for making accurate predictions and is an indispensable volume for anyone engaged in species management or conservation The Cumulative Book Index ,1988 A world list of books in the English language Proceedings of the South Dakota Academy of Science South Dakota Academy of Science, 2005 Forest Management and Economics Joseph Buongiorno, J.
