Nanostructured Soft Matter A.V. Zvelindovsky,2007-11-06 The scientist does not study nature because it is useful he studies it because he delights in it and he delights in it because it is beautiful If nature were not beautiful it would not be worth knowing and if nature were not worth knowing life would not be worth living Henri Poincar e 1854 1912 The ancient Greeks quite ingeniously realised that all materials and their now known as macroscopic properties including life itself are due to a limited number of tiny constantly moving building blocks and the connections now called interactions between these blocks. Receiving both scientific and non-scientific opposition, the idea faded and despite some renaissance of atomistic ideas in the 17-19th centuries it still took more than two thousand years until the time of Einstein for the idea of microscopic building blocks to be fully accepted. These ideas begun during the golden age of physics in the 20th century have led to a comprehensive understanding of such states of matter as gases and solids which in turn have completely revolutionised everyday life in the developed world by introducing technological wonders such as modern cars, air traffic, semiconductor chips for computers and nuclear power. Another state of matter fluids appeared to be much more difficult to tackle even in the case of simple liquids like liquid argon, a research favourite in the field. Legend tells that Lev D
